Accusations Flew At Haney Inquest

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Tempers flared and accusations flew Thursday at a second inquest into a fatal Boxing Day accident in Haney, in the Fraser Valley.

Two lawyers, Thomas Griffith and T. K. Fisher, clashed angrily in a debate over the type of questions they should be permitted to ask witnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Johnson and three of their five children died in the two-car crash, which also involved a car driven by off-duty RCMP Constable Orville Nickel.

Chief Provincial Coroner Glen McDonald told Griffith, representing the Johnson estate: "If you don't like the way I'm handling this inquest then you can go to a high court to get a writ to have it stopped."

During the angry debate Fisher accused Griffith of attempting to crucify his client, Constable Nickle.

Fisher also suggested later to Robert Mussallem that the Mussallem family of Haney has a vendetta against Nickel. "Absolutely not," replied witness Robert, son of Dewdney MLA George Mussallem. "I would like to know what the vendetta is."

Two flareups began when Griffith asked the MLA, who also viewed the accident scene, what he would have done if it had been his grandson or a neighbor's boy in the vehicle.

Interjected Fisher: "Your eulogizing will not return the Johnsons to earth. And eulogizing by me will never remove the scarring from Nickel done to him by the media."

Griffith contended his questions were pertinent and he wanted to discuss the actions of RCMP at the scene. "The accident involved a young man, an off-duty RCMP officer who was travelling at a great speed over the speed limit."

Interjected Fisher, "What you are trying to do is crucify that boy (Nickel) again."

The MLA was asked by Fisher whether he was responsible for the new inquest. "I guess you could say that," he replied. "I happen to be the MLA from the area and subject to extensive pressure from citizens.

"I had to report to the attorney-general that the situation was far from satisfactory and something had to be done."

Another son of the MLA, David Mussallem, said he wanted to take two of the occupants of the Johnson vehicle to hospital before the ambulance arrived. He said it was possible that RCMP were under instructions not to touch accident victims until ambulance crews arrived on the scene.

"That may be the proper procedure but in efforts of life-saving they should do more. I think it should be reviewed."

ALLOWS YEN TO FLOAT

Japan Bows to Nixon

TOKYO (CP)—Japan bowed to international pressure today and allowed its currency to float temporarily as an alternative to outright revaluation.

The action, after two weeks of trying to hold the yen to parity of 360 to the U.S. dollar, was a major victory for President Nixon's program to return U.S. trade balance in the black.

A Japanese finance ministry announcement said the yen would be freed as of Saturday to find its own exchange level against the dollar.

The announcement said that as a temporary measure the official restrictions which prevent the yen from rising or falling more than one per cent either side of its official parity would be removed.

The decision was a dramatic reversal of an announcement by the government Tuesday that no action would be taken on the yen until multi-national negotiations in mid-September.

The decision to allow the yen to float was made at an emergency meeting of senior finance ministry officials called to consider the continued confusion on the Tokyo foreign exchange markets.

The yen, which was considerably undervalued, was the chief target of Nixon's announcement Aug. 15 suspending the gold standard and putting a supplementary levy of up to 10 per cent on dutiable imports into the United States.

Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta said floating the yen — allowing it to find its own rate according to the demand and supply—would be temporary.

Japanese commercial banks, anticipating the government's action, sold dollars heavily today on the Tokyo exchange, and the Bank of Japan bought a record $1.2 billion at the interbank rate of 357.37 yen, the usual intervention level.

The commercial banks had bought more than $500 million Tuesday and Wednesday after the central bank warned them to adhere more closely to its guidelines on required holdings. The commercial banks complained that this subjected them to undue risks since the dollar was floating on the European markets. The Bank of Japan then relaxed enforcement of its requirement, and the banks liquidated their dollar holdings.

CONTROL YEN MARGIN

Tadashi Sasaki, governor of the Bank of Japan, said in a statement that if the yen's margin of fluctuation against the dollar becomes too large, the central bank will buy dollars to stabilize the rate.

The Bank of Japan has bought about $4 billion in the last two weeks to keep the value of the yen down.

The government feared that increasing the value of the yen would cut into Japanese exports and have a deflationary effect that would intensify the sluggishness of the economy. But the pressure from abroad, and particularly the spectre of the 10-per-cent U.S. import charge, outweighed arguments in favor of standing fast.

The finance ministry said that in deciding on a temporary float, the government has not abandoned the yen's old par value.

"If is the intention of the government of Japan," it said, "to make active efforts, in collaboration with other governments, to reinforce the international monetary system so that the stability of external transactions can be restored as soon as possible," the ministry's statement said.

The finance ministry also announced that the government would submit a supplementary budget to the Diet, the Japanese parliament, to offset the effects of the U.S. import charge and also to improve "Japan's social infrastructure as well as the general standard of living."

FLOAT BOND ISSUE

Other measures will include active flotation of national bonds, additional fiscal loans and an investments program.

The announcement came after Japan's external reserves jumped to more than $12.5 billion with the huge purchase of dollars.

Uncertainty over the yen's parity caused chaos and confusion on the Tokyo stock and foreign exchange markets, and bankers and businessmen warned that the markets could not stand much more pressure.

Official sources said the decision by the finance ministry meant Japan is prepared to run risks to ascertain how much the yen is undervalued, as claimed by other nations.

The officials said the floating, which follows similar action by most of the West European currencies, meant Japan could now more or less line up with West Europe in talks on parity adjustments next year.

UNDERVALUED

The Japanese action is expected to improve greatly the U.S. balance of trade deficit which now has grown to $676.4 million since January.

On the home front, Washington reports there has been a thaw in relations with powerful U.S. labor unions.

Labor and officials will now discuss action to be taken once the wage-price freeze has been lifted on Nov. 12.

Canadian Goods Benefit From Move

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian goods which were competing with Japanese exports in the United States now may be able to regain their position, an informant said today.

This is the likely result of Japan's decision to let the yen float in international exchange markets. But the extent of the improved climate for Canadian exports will not be known until foreign exchange trading settles down to the new situation next week.

As officials here saw it earlier this week, Japan's attempt to hold the yen at its old pegged value of 360 to the U.S. dollar, while other major currencies drifted upward, was a desperate Japanese effort to retain a trading edge.

While Japanese goods would be hit by President Nixon's 10-per-cent surcharge on imports of dutiable goods, those of other countries going into the United States would have to meet the stiff price of the 10-per-cent surcharge plus the higher cost to American buyers of securing the foreign exchange needed to pay their bills.

Floating the yen, with the pressures in exchange markets for a higher valuation on it, means that American buyers of Japanese goods will also have to pay more for Japanese goods.

To the extent that Canadian goods compete with Japanese goods in the U.S. market, the floating yen should be of some benefit to Canadian exporters, particularly if the yen moves up substantially.

The main competitive areas are believed to be in synthetic rubber and plastics, and in machinery and mechanical and electrical equipment.

Meanwhile, Ottawa officials reportetly made "good progress" Thursday in their bid to rexemption from the United States' new 10 per cent import surcharge. Deputy finance minister Simon S. Reisman said today, however, no agreement was reached at the Washington session with U.S. treasury officials called to follow last week's meeting between Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Treasury Secretary John Connally.

CANCER SPENDING CUT

The provincial health department had $450,000 to spend on cancer control last year, but spent only $72,174.

The $377,000 under-expenditure is one of many under-expenditures revealed in the abridged public accounts released Thursday by the provincial government for the year ending March 31, 1971.

Premier Bennett clamped tight spending controls on the government during much of the year because of a slowdown in the economy and in government revenues. He finished the year with a $16 million surplus.

A $600,000 public health research vote was underspent by $105,000; a $2.4 million vote for in-patient care of tuberculosis hospitals was underspent by $440,000.

"Grants for health agencies" were under-spent by $123,000 on a total budget of $600,000.

In all, the public health service under-spent its $15 million budget by $4.5 million.

The mental health branch under-spent its $37 million allocation by $3.6 million, including a $2.3 million under-expenditure on a $32 million budget for in-patient mental care. Hospital insurance services were over-spent by $2.4 million.

Striking Calgary Guards Defy Back to Work Order

CALGARY (CP) — Guards at the Calgary correctional institution went on strike today, declining to follow the example of guards at other provincial jails who returned to work quickly after being served with a court injunction.

The Calgary guards planned a meeting to discuss whether they would follow the other guards who returned to work.

Guards at all five provincial jails were served with the injunction.

The injunction expires later today but the attorney-general's department can apply for a more permanent injunction shortly before the expiration.

Ernie Lawson, employee relations officer for the Civil Service Association which represents the 575 correctional officers who had threatened to go on strike, said his group was preparing to oppose the injunction request.

However, the association would allow the correctional officers to make their own decisions on whether they would stay on the job if the government obtained a further injunction.

PREVENTS PICKETING

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said today the injunction was issued to prevent picketing, not directly to prevent a strike.

"I would never restrain a man from quitting a job he did not like," Mr. Gerhart said in an interview.

The attorney-general has stated that any correctional officer who goes on strike will be fired because such a walk-out would be illegal.

The RCMP had been on standby alert, ready to take over duties at the institutions, when the regular guards walked off.

Few Forecast Winner In Alberta Election

EDMONTON (CP) — The final major rally of the 1971 Alberta election campaign will be held tonight in Calgary and as the Monday vote approaches, few observers are brave enough to predict the outcome.

Neither Premier Harry Strom nor Progressive Conservative Leader Peter Lougheed, the front-runners in the campaign, will predict the number of seats they will win.

"We are confident," said Premier Strom, fighting his first election as government leader—a position he inherited in 1968 from E. C. Manning, now a senator.

"I sense a growing momentum and a desire for change," Mr. Lougheed told a crowd Thursday night in Edmonton's Jubilee Auditorium—a rally which attracted more people than the Social Credit rally Wednesday night.

Wednesday, however, the premier and his candidates had to compete with a Western Football Conference game in the city.

The Social Crediters and Conservatives have both held their major Edmonton rallies and the premier moves into Calgary tonight.

Grant Notley, the New Democratic Party leader who attracted 1,100 persons at a Calgary rally, says any more than one seat for his party would "be a bonus." Mr. Notley is predicted as the winner in Spirit River-Fairview in northern Alberta.

Liberal Leader Bob Russell, whose party has 20 candidates in the field, is fighting a tough four-way battle in St. Albert.

The number of seats needed to form a government in the enlarged 75-seat legislature is 38. Redistribution added 10 seats. At dissolution, the Social Credit government held 54 seats, the Conservatives 10 and one seat was vacant.

The Social Credit and Conservative parties each have full slates of 75 candidates while the NDP has candidates in 70 ridings. Three independents bring the candidate total to 243.

THE GOOD LIFE FOR INFORMERS

MARSEILLES, France (Reuter) — The United States bureau of narcotics offered big rewards and a comfortable life abroad Thursday to any Frenchmen giving information which would help smash drug rings operating near this Mediterranean port.

The offer came from European bureau chief John Cusak, who also suggested that French police deliberately overlooked the drug traffic here.

U.S. authorities have estimated that the bulk of hard core drugs reaching the United States from the Middle East passes through Marseilles.

Cusak offered to "compensate big rewards" to informers as well as "the means to live in safety outside France if the person compromised himself."

Ottawa Sets Up Security Group

OTTAWA (CP) — A security group to advise the cabinet and federal government on threats to the national social, political and economic order has been set up by the solicitor-general's department.

A department spokesman said today the force—called the security planning and research group—now has three members and will probably develop to 20 persons.

Although Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, vacationing in Europe, was not available for comment, the spokesman said the group will gather and analyse information "from all sources" and report to cabinet.

It was set up so "the government can anticipate things before they happen," the spokesman said. It will gather and report information "that might appear from non-military, subversive groups."

Although it has no direct connection with other police forces, the group will have close liaison with the RCMP and other forces.

The spokesman said the group was set up partly because of the October crisis in Quebec. At that time "there was a great deal of confusion and information was not getting to the right people quickly enough."

The group now is composed of Col. Robin Bourne, a former adviser to the Privy Council in internal security and an artillery officer, Lt.-Col. Walter Dabros, a former member of the armed forces security branch and S.-Sgt. Patrick Banning, formerly of the RCMP.

The three have no assigned budget, but are receiving salaries, the spokesman said. The department will spent about $20,000 on the group this year.

"But that depends on how quickly they recruit."

Legal Pot Draws Fire

By JAMIE UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Most early reaction to the report of the federal committee on youth dealt with only one of its 29 recommendations: The proposed legalization of such cannabis drugs as marijuana and hashish.

Police spokesmen, medical authorities and drug-abuse workers joined in disapproval of the proposal, rejecting it at least until more is known about the effects of the drugs. A few civil rights workers supported it.

"It is for the birds," said Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer.

- Most officials declined comment on other committee proposals until they have studied the report. However, Saul Miller, Manitoba's minister of youth and education, said he agreed with recommendations for a new student loan program and the committee rejection of a $10 monthly payment to encourage students to stay in school until 18.

But the committee's recommendation on cannabis, which said existing laws against soft drugs are untenable, drew plenty of fire.

PREDICTED REACTION

Vincent Kelly, a Toronto civil rights lawyer and member of the three-man committee, predicted the reaction Thursday when he expressed dismay at the emphasis news reports gave to the cannabis recommendation.

"Our worst fears have been realized," he said.

David Lewis, leader of the Federal New Democratic Party, said he agrees that possession of marijuana should be removed from the Criminal Code but from reports on the recommendations "it sounds a little wild."

Robert Welch, Ontario minister of education, termed the cannabis recommendation irresponsible.

The Canadian Medical Association opposed the legalization of soft drugs because, it said, not enough is known about their effects.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal treasury had a $39-million deficit in government budgetary accounts in July, bringing the surplus for the first four months of the current fiscal year down to $497 million, the finance department reported Thursday.

Cows, Dogs 'Sensed' Quebec Killer Slide

MONTREAL (CP) — A herd of cows and two dogs apparently sensed the St. Jean Vianney landslide disaster three hours before it happened, investigators revealed in a preliminary report Thursday.

The massive earthslide swept through the small town 145 miles north of Quebec City May 4, moving 15 million tons of earth, swallowing up 40 homes and killing 31 persons.

The report was prepared by three investigators led by Quebec government geologist Jean-Yves Chagnon.

The investigators studied the terrain and interviewed dozens of area residents for information on the slide which swept through the town of 1,300 as many were preparing for bed.

Pitre Blackburn, a farmer, testified that he was unable to send his cows back to their grazing land at about 7:30 p.m. on the night of the disaster. The slide occurred three hours later.

"The cows, though usually docile, refused two attempts to put them out in the field so that Mr. Blackburn had to leave them in the barn," the report said.

The field was washed away by the slide, the report added.

Two other disaster survivors reported that their dogs began behaving "abnormally" around 7 p.m. The animals were described as being extremely nervous.

One man said his dog acted the same as he did during a thunderstorm.

Both pet owners saw their streets torn in half by the slide.

A chilling description of the disaster was given to investigators by Mrs. Roger Filion. She reported that Mrs. Lise Laforge, who perished along with her three children in the slide, called her between 10:30 and 10:45 p.m.

Mrs. Laforge asked Mrs. Filion if she felt a slight earthquake. She said she could suddenly see the lights of the city of Chicoutimi from a window in her home.

This was unusual because the view of the city had been previously obstructed from the Laforge home by a hill 30-feet high. But the hill was swallowed up in the slide and moments later the Laforge home went with it, taking Mrs. Laforge and her three children to their deaths.

Bus driver Jules Girard said he was driving his bus when he slowed down to pass over what appeared to be a small gully in the gravel road.

"However, as the front wheels of the bus reached the gully, the soil in front of the vehicle just 'disappeared' and the bus got stuck on the edge of the slide with its front wheels in the air," the report said.

Girard ordered the 18 passengers to escape via the rear door and was the last man to leave the bus. He then ran in a westerly direction, describing the sensation of the 150-foot climb as like running on moving stairs."

He had time to warn the inhabitants of one house on the way but could not get to three other houses.

Mr. Gerard saw the three houses disappear into the crater with a sudden, vertical movement the report said.

He also saw a car driving down the road disappear into the crater.

"It would be tantamount to legalizing ignorance," said Douglas Geekie, CMA director of communications. "We do not yet know the long-term effects of these drugs. In fact, research is only just under way on them."

FORESEES DISASTER

Nick Leluk, a spokesman for the Council on Drug Abuse, said legalized sale, possession and use of cannabis could lead to "another thalidomide disaster."

"We don't want a recurrence of the thalidomide situation," he said. "Only after thousands of deformed babies were born did we learn about that drug's effects."

Sylvanus Apps, Ontario minister of correctional services, also said he is opposed to making the soft drugs legal "until we have all the facts."

Others with the same opinion included Dr. Lionel Solursh, chairman of the CMA committee on drug abuse; Dr. Wilfrid Boothroyd, senior medical research officer for the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation; Peter Turner, president of Toronto's experimental Rochdale College, and Dr. C. J. Varvis, president of the Alberta Medical Association.

Douglas Denholm, executive director of the British Columbia Narcotics Addiction Foundation, said the recommendation was "at best premature and at worst irresponsible."

He agreed that existing law has failed to control the misuse of drugs, but said more information on the physiological effects of cannabis is needed.

There were two lonely voices in support of the committee's recommendation.

Dr. Reg Robson, president of the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, said that "since there is no evidence of harmful physiological effects, it should be a private matter like the consumption of alcohol or tobacco, which do have harmful effects."

And Rev. Raymond Durocher, research director for the Ontario Separate School Trustees' Association, said that "the sooner they treat marijuana like alcohol the better it will be."

BRINGS OTHER REPLIES

Early reaction to other committee recommendations was scarce and cautious, but it too indicated the committee had stepped on more than one established hornet's nest.

Criticism of the Company of Young Canadians and a recommendation that it be disbanded appeared to be based on old information, said CYC Executive Director Dal Brodhead. The CYC has been reorganized and the criticisms probably are outdated, he said.

The committee did draw one burst of early enthusiasm with a recommendation for a stronger federal role in education.

If they mean that the federal government should concern itself directly with post-secondary education, said Dalhousie University President Dr. Henry Hicks, "I agree wholeheartedly."

TV SHOWS ON DISCS

BERLIN (Reuter) — An audio-visual system of recording television porgrams on a paper-thin disc like a gramophone record was unveiled Thursday after six years of research.

The video disc system, jointly developed by West German and British firms, will enable viewers to buy recorded programs which they can screen by playing them on a machine linked by cable to a standard color or black-and-white set, the makers say.

The makers say that the discs, which should sell for about the same price as a gramophone record, could be inserted in newspapers and magazines to give visual supplement to the written word.

Underpass Bid Accepted

Surrey Iron Works Ltd. has been awarded a $174,330 contract to erect and fabricate structural steel for the Quadra Street underpass at the Patricia Bay Highway.

Provincial treasury board approval for contract was announced today by Premier W. A. C. Bennett. Work is expected to begin soon.

HAPPY DEATH

LE HAVRE (AP) — Patrick, 19, and Maryvonne, 21, were so happy Thursday they decided to die.

In the bright morning, they drove the little car up on the cliffs above the English Channel at Le Treport.

They wrote a letter. Then they headed the Fiat for a 300-foot drop to the beach below.

They explained in the letter they were so happy that they wished their love to become eternal.

Patrick was a student, Mayrvonne a waitress. Vacationers saw the car pitch off the clifftop and found their bodies, arms entwined, in the wreckage.

6 Towns Ask Loffmark To Supply Them a Doctor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said Thursday at least six British Columbia towns are in need of doctors, but are unable to find them.

Loffmark made the comment in a telephone interview from Prince Rupert when asked about the lack of a doctor at Gold River.

The only doctor at Gold River stopped his practice about a month ago for health reasons and since then residents have had to go more than 50 miles to Campbell River for medical treatment.

Residents of Gold River have urged Loffmark to use power granted to him recently to appoint a doctor for the town of 2,500 persons. An order-in-council passed last month gives Loffmark the power to grant, deny or control a doctor's right to practice in a particular hospital.

However, Dr. W. G. McClure, registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, said the order does not give Loffmark power to send doctors where he wants them.

"If Loffmark tries to appoint a doctor to an area he would not be opposed by the college, but the doctor approached would probably tell him where to go," he said.

Loffmark did not name the six towns requiring doctors, but Vanderhoof was earlier reported in need.

. . . SPENDING CUTS

Among other under expenditures, revealed several weeks ago in the mid-year economic review published by the government, were cuts in construction of highways, public buildings and similar capital projects.

In the education department, $6.7 million was left from a total budge of $365 million.

Biggest single under expenditure was $5 million on technical and vocational schools capital expenditures.

Premier Bennett's own finance department left $1.8 million of its $21 million budge unspent. Biggest single amount unspent was $1.3 million for salary contingencies.

The department of industrial development trade and commerce spent only $3.2 million of its $3.9 million budget.

POLLUTION

The Water Resources Services underspent by $7 million on an $18 million budget, with the bulk of savings on Libby Dam Reservoir preparation ($3.2 million unspent) and under the Canada-British Columbia Joint Development Act ($3.2 million unspent).

Of $620,000 allocated for pollution control, $136,000 was unspent.

Of $5 million set aside for housing and urban renenwal, $2.3 million was unspent. This vote has generally been underspent in recent years.

Government House did not spend $5,142 of its $63,868 allocation from the provincial secretary's department.

While social welfare paid out was overspent by $19.6 million above the allocated $114.5 million, the allocation for field services by social workers was underspent by $518,000 on a total allocation of $5 million.

In all, Bennett's revenues on the year were almost $97 million higher than he estimated he would get but spending, with the help of many over expended votes and $50 million in special appropriations, was also up by $79 million over estimates.

Reluctant To Sentence 'Beggar'

Judge William Ostler "with some reluctance" Thursday convicted a sidewalk musician of begging.

"In my view, the accused is not a vagrant in the unpleasant sense of the term," Ostler said.

He sentenced Fred Bowser, 21, of Toronto, to a minimal one day in jail, leaving him free to go.

Bowser and James Dunaway, 22, also of Toronto, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to begging in a public place, a section of the Vagrancy Act.

Court was told that two were singing and playing guitars on the sidewalk in the 1200-block Douglas about 4:15 p.m. Monday.

On the sidewalk in front of them was an open guitar case with a hand-lettered sign reading 'Going To the Yukon!'. There was about $3.70 in loose change lying in the case.

Ostler said if the guitar-playing episode had been an isolated case then he would have dismissed the charge for reasonable doubt.

★ ★ ★

The Crown, however, he pointed out had shown antecedent evidence of Aug. 21 when the two were warned by police.

Const. William Norris testified he saw the accused playing and singing in the 1100-block Douglas Aug. 21. He said he saw the open guitar case with the sign and "a substantial amount of money" in bills and change in the case.

Ostler termed the sign "an entreaty for support."

He added, however, that the earlier warning brought the case within a course of conduct consistent with vagrancy.

He noted that the accused had said the guitar playing was a way of looking after himself and he was intending to go north to look for winter work.

"I must find with some reluctance the accused guilty."

Ostler said the charge was clearly a test case and sought to disqualify himself from taking Dunaway's trial.

Prosecutor John Macintyre, following Bowser's conviction, withdrew the same charge against Dunaway.

German Vessel Aground

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — The German-registered vessel Transmichigan today was aground in 23 feet of water in Lake Huron, a half-mile north of here, following a collision with the Brazilian freighter Netuno.

The United States Coast Guard in Port Huron, Mich., said 42 persons were on board the German vessel, including 11 passengers. There were no injuries. The passengers were taken to a Port Huron motel.

The coast guard was unable to give details of the collision which apparently occurred about 4:30 a.m. on calm waters with a visibility of about 7½ miles.

The coast guard said the crew and captain of the 429-foot Transmichigan are still aboard the ship. The 10,846-ton Netuno, however, was not damaged below the water line and continued downbound toward Detroit.

Caouette Faces Challenge

TORONTO (CP) — James McGillivray, 42, of Collingwood, Ont., announced today he will challenge Real Caouette, whom he described as de facto leader of the Social Credit Party of Canada, at a leadership convention in Hull, Que., Oct. 9-11.

Dr. McGillivray, vice-president of the party, told a news conference he is running for the leadership to stress more strongly major issues and not because he is dissatisfied with party policies.

He said that since the party's recent reorganization and change of name from Ralliement Creditiste, Mr. Caouette has been "de facto leader." An official leader has not yet been chosen, he said.

Dr. McGillivray, a native of Weyburn, Sask., said his intention is to "lead and not merely represent the party."

"I hope to redress the image of the party as being rural and Quebec-based as well as obtaining more support and respectability for monetary reform which is the keystone of economic prosperity."

The party has 12 members in Parliament—all from Quebec.

Dr. McGillivray is undecided about the riding he would seek for election to Parliament if he was elected leader.

"If there is a byelection in Assiniboia (Saskatchewan) this fall, then I will seek election there because that is where my hometown is," he said. "But if there isn't, then I will probably run in Gray Simcoe in Ontario."

He has never contested a seat in an election.

Tot Dies Swallowing Detergent

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A 15-months-old girl has died from swallowing a handful of nonphosphate laundry detergent, the director of the poison information centre here said today.

Arthur F. Blank said that in 14 years with the poison centre he could not recall another infant death from ingestion of any laundry detergent.

The child, who lived in Putnam, Conn., died Aug. 15. Blank declined to give her name or the name of the detergent involved.

Blank said the high alkalinity of the non-phosphate detergents makes them dangerous to children, and manufacturers have been required to put strong warnings on the package—although these "don't do much good for the child who can't read."

Engineer Sentenced

SARAJEVO (AP) — A Yugoslav court sentenced locomotive engineer Alojz Okrajac to 15 years in prison Thursday on conviction of causing a train accident that killed 13 school children and their teacher. The court sentenced the engineer's assistant to seven years in jail for his role in the crash near Sarajevo last July. The court found the two crew members failed to brake the train despite warning lights that called for a stop.

Merchants Sentenced

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — Two Cambodian-born Chinese businessmen have been sentenced to death by firing squad on charges of economic sabotage by reselling cars at inflated prices. The trial was the first for economic sabotage and speculation since the Cambodian war broke out nearly 18 months ago, bringing sharp inflation.

Leader to Be Picked

SASKATOON (CP) — A leadership convention to choose a successor to former premier Ross Thatcher likely will be held Dec. 3 and 4 in Saskatoon, Dave Steuart, acting leader of the Saskatoon Liberal Party said Thursday.

Steuart said a final decision on dates will be made within the next few days.

Thatcher died July 23, one month after his party was swept from power by the New Democratic Party in a provincial election.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Drop out to Esquimalt lagoon any day this week and see the bare-handed fisherman at work. I kid you not, without benefit of line or lure this guy catches fish — and in his bare hands, or feet to be more precise — not every time mind you, but often enough to keep body and soul together.

He's the North American representative of a cosmopolitan species of bird found along rivers and sea coasts of the world from New Guinea to Alaska and from Norway to Madagascar. He's known by many aliases — fish hawk, fishing eagle but osprey is his proper handle.

CRUISES HIGH

Without doubt, one of the most spectacular sights of summer around Esquimalt lagoon — next to some of the bikini-clad maids enjoying the sun — is the majestic, sweeping dive of an osprey after a fish.

Smaller than the familiar bald eagle, with whom he shares sometimes unintentionally the fisheries of British Columbia, the osprey is usually seen cruising high above the waves, his sharp eyes scanning the water below for fish swimming just under the surface.

When he spots one, it's a signal for one of natures spectacles to begin.

Keeping his quarry in view, the osprey hovers for a moment, his powerful wings holding him in position while he makes the mental adjustments for refraction, wind deflection and whatever else that goes into getting him successfully to his target — the unsuspecting fish.

When all systems are go, the dive begins, slowly at first but accelerating and steepening as the bird nears the water. With wings half-closed he plummets towards his target. Suddenly, a moment before striking the surface, his powerful talons shoot forwar ready to grasp the prey and in a flashing plume of white wate he plunges beneath the surface.

MIGHTY SURGE

Seconds later — or so it seems — he reappears, shudders to shake away the excess water and with a mighty surge of powerful pinions, rises clear. And like all good fishermen he often heads home with nothing more than a tale to tell about the one that got away.

But, if lady luck is flying with him, with a triumphant, high-pitched cry, he'll lumber skyward with the fruits of his labor clasped firmly in those magnificent talons.

As he struggles skyward, he will release the fish momentarily, shifting it in his talons to carry it head first. Does he know the fish offers less wind resistance this way? Nobody knows, but it is a fact that ospreys will turn the fish head foremost whenever possible.

HEADS HOME

Now he's ready to head home, either to a nest of ravenous youngsters or to his own favorite feeding perch; that is if the eagles will let him.

Occasionally a pair of bald eagles — who are also raising a family somewhere in the area — will happen on friend osprey lugging his hard-won victuals home. Then the stage is set for a real aerial spectacular.

The two eagles, with a precision obviously born of long practice, will set to work pestering the osprey until he drops the fish. Taking turns rising above him and diving, they force evasive action. Efficient evasive action is difficult with a fish clasped in your talons but the osprey does his best.

DROPS FISH

Eventually the persistence of the eagles pays off and the harased osprey drops his fish. Like a bolt of lightning, one of the eagles swoops to pluck it out of the air before it strikes the water.

On the other hand, the fish may drop into the bush, and be lost to both contestants.

Bald eagles are quite capable of doing their own fishing but always seem to be on the lookout for the hapless osprey to work-over.

These displays of nature in action once could be seen over much of North America — at least wherever bald eagles and ospreys shared the environment. They are rarely, if ever, seen in the eastern part of the continent now. Both species have suffered because of their fish-eating habits and DDT apparently has been the culprit.

HOLDING ON

Fortunately, along the northwest Pacific coast from Oregon to Alaska, both species seem to be holding on to a tenuous existence. Our eagles and ospreys could be the reservoir to repopulate the continent someday. But only if we get the place cleaned up.

It's still fairly clean out Esquimalt lagoon way, and the eagles and ospreys are doing their thing. If you are lucky you might just get a ringside seat to some real action, and it won't cost you a devalued cent.

Rex Harrison and his bride.

HARRISON WEDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Rex Harrison, 63, and Elizabeth Harris, 34, the former wife of British actor Richard Harris, were married Thursday at the Long Island estate of Alan Jay Lerner, lyricist for My Fair Lady and other musical hits.

It was the fifth marriage for Harrison, who played the role of Henry Higgins in My Fair Lady in the mid-1950s, and in 1966 starred in the movie version.

Mrs. Harrison is the daughter of a British peer, Lord Og- more. She has three children by her previous marriage.

Harrison's previous wives were Noel Thomas, Lilli Palmer, the late Kay Kendall and Rachel Roberts, from whom he was divorced last February.

Justice Hyman Barshay of the state Supreme Court performed the ceremony. The couple left immediately afterward for London and in a few days plan to proceed to Harrison's villa at Portofino, Italy.

Startling Amount of Ignorance Among Youth Concerning Sex

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM

NEW YORK (NYT) — It may come as a surprise to those who picture today's youth as wild products of a permissive age, but there is a startling amount of sexual ignorance among the more than seven million U.S. college students.

In talks with students in recent months, many faculty members have been amazed by such questions as:

- Is it true there are some days I can conceive and some days I can't?
- Can a person get pregnant standing up?
- Can you get pregnant the first time you have intercourse?

As a result of such questions and other student pressure, dozens of college have acted to bridge the sex gap with remedial sex education measures. Some college newspapers, too, are carrying columns of sex advice. There have been these major developments:

- A growing number of schools are now offering courses on human sexuality, although some are titled "family living," which give basic instruction on the human body and reproduction process. One textbook alone ("Human Sexuality") is now used at more than 200 schools.

45 COURSES

In a recent limited survey of 35 colleges, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, a private agency, found that 29 listed 45 different courses on sexuality for credit. The council concluded: "Considerably more is being done in the way of sex education on the undergraduate level than is generally thought."

- Under student pressure and the leadership of young doctors such as Dr. Takey Crist at the University of North Carolina, more schools now provide a wide range of sex counseling on abortion and birth control at student health centres, once limited to handling out aspirin and diagnosing mononucleosis.

Moralistic arguments aside, these doctors have determined that the tragic problem of unmarried mothers and illegitimate babies along with spreading venereal diseases and medical complications from cheap abortions are based in large part on ignorance and that the best way to combat such problems is to increase sex counseling.

FILLING A NEED

Explicit sex handbooks appeared at many schools, including Duke, Yale, Boston University and the University of Rhode Island. Although generally published independently by student organizations, such guides are often welcomed by school administrations as filling a need, and their distribution is unofficially aided on campus. A 58-page publication of the University of Pennsylvania covers, among other things, the pill, rape, abortion, crab lice and venereal disease.

Monument to What?

BY CHANCE, MAYOR HADdock's anticipatory estimate that the proposed Reid development on Wharf Street would produce $300,000 a year in tax revenue for the city was followed very soon after by a remark of federal Urban Affairs Minister Andras which deserves wide attention.

Mr. Andras, while obviously loath to be drawn into a local controversy about high-rise structures, said that he is "increasingly concerned over taking the long view and preserving beauty" in urban development. He also warned against "obliteration of the waterfront" by construction projects, hoped that there was not going to be a "pure buck approach" to development of the waterfront here, and urged that the citizens' views be considered in any harbor planning.

That is plain enough for anyone who is not addicted to the "pure buck" philosophy of city planning. It means that a gain of $300,000 in tax revenues from a high-rise development could be offset by a loss of much more than that from such building. With the high-density population engendered by high-rise dwellings a city may face the expenses of costly traffic changes, added fire protection costs, street widening or new construction, and other practical ground-level problems.

But the intangible effects could be even more expensive, for what tax revenue can compensate for the loss of scenic assets when these assets are the major physical attraction of the city? How will Council assess the losses arising from the changed environment created by a high-rise, the encroachment on the breathing-space of the neighborhood, the canyon effect created in the streets, the impetus given to proliferation of still more high-rises, and other results inseparable from such a change?

The tragedy of City Council's recent action on the Reid scheme is only partly that aldermen approve it. It is chiefly that they do not appear to realize the significant watershed that they have crossed in agreeing to a high-rise on the seafront of the city's core area.

They do not seem to realize that with the Reid development they have abandoned the long-held concept of Victoria's environment and aesthetic climate and pushed further along on a course which will eventually destroy the traditional beauty of the Victoria cityscape — the low-profile buildings, the openness of light and air, the surrounding vistas of sea or mountain, the innate quality of a city whose charm draws visitors from across the continent.

All this they are gambling, and inevitably losing, for the lure of architectural giantism and bigger tax revenues which will soon be swallowed up in coping with the train of disadvantages which will follow. Council is building a monument. To what?

Now, Members by Choice

IN THE OPINION OF A SPOKESman at its Naramata conference, the B.C. Teachers' Federation may expect to lose 10 per cent of its membership as a result of the "open shop" legislation covering the profession passed by the government last year. That is a significant, but by no means crippling, reduction in the BCTF numerical strength. If nine out of 10 teachers voluntarily maintain their memberships, it will indicate that the federation has convinced the profession that it is doing a useful job in a satisfactory manner.

The BCTF president sees the need for a recruitment campaign as a result of government action eliminating automatic membership, and he calls for unity within the teachers' ranks. This is a reasonable enough position — and could result in a strengthening of the organization. In future, federation members will join on a basis of choice, not as a virtual requisite to find employment in the public school system.

Experience may have taught the federation the divisive elements in the kind of political operation in which it became involved — and for which withdrawal of automatic membership is seen as government reprisal. It is entirely proper for teachers as individuals to involve themselves in politics. But they must understand what involvement entails. For some — the successful ones — it has meant election to seats in the legislature. But when, collectively, it carries partisan implications, it can be costly in cases where the campaign is unsuccessful, as the "bitten apple" crusade against the government so obviously was.

The call for unity should take that point into consideration. Teachers have sufficient professional interests in common to follow united courses in their particular vocational field. When they overlook the differences in party allegiance among members they invite the kind of trouble they encountered when the apple campaign turned sour.

Prague's Quiet Weekend

THE AUGUST 21 WEEKEND was a quiet one in Prague, according to reports. No dramatic incidents or demonstrations marked the anniversary of the Warsaw Pact nations' invasion of Czechoslovakia. Moscow appeared to have achieved its aim of using willing Czech Communists to curb the liberalizing deviations of those who favored the Dubcek regime.

This was an accomplishment of sorts for the Kremlin. Yet it left something to be desired. If there was lack of activity honoring the victims of the Warsaw Pact invasion and subsequent events, there appeared to be equal or greater apathy among most Czechs for the regime which has replaced Dubcek and sworn allegiance to the doctrine made in Moscow. The population, it seemed, no longer cares.

The economy of the country, threatened following the invasion, has turned upward to a substantial degree. There are more commodities to buy in the stores. But improvement in material living conditions appears to have promoted no great outpouring of appreciation for the Russian masters or their designated Czech leaders. A country, proud under Benes and Masaryk as well as under Dubcek, seems content now with a role of disaffected docility — for the time being, but no one knows for how long.

Warmer in the Far East

INDICATIONS ARE THAT RELAtions between Japan and China will begin to take a warmer course. A leading Chinese diplomat will be present at the funeral of Mr. Kenzo Matsumura, a Japanese statesman who favored closer ties between the two countries. Mr. Hideji Kawasaki, a leading member of Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic party, will head a nine-man goodwill mission to China in September.

Events in the Far East have had the coloration of the 1930s, with Japan seen as a somewhat aggressive power taking advantage of Chinese weakness. But responsible leaders of both countries are taking steps to put relations on a better basis. If Japan adopts a policy more independent of the United States, Tokyo's new relations with China could set the tone for its whole foreign policy. The present thaw in relations should be reinforced. Is there any reason for Tokyo to wait on Washington before recognizing the Peking regime?

National Defence: The Accent Is Domestic

THE WHITE PAPER, Defence in the 70s, reveals on Page 32 "NATO'S collective defence rests primarily on defence of national homelands." Canada is one of only two partners which station forces outside their own continent and six that station them outside their borders for NATO purposes.

Western

"An understanding of this situation," we learn, "is important to put in proper perspective the change in Canadian force deployment announced in April 1969."

As a belated justification of change, this is somewhat peculiar since it is an assertion that the situation is as the situation always was. More pressing, probably, were the other concerns noted by Mr. Macdonald, although not in his order. We had competing national aims:

There was a regrettable limit on funds available to our government; and fortunately Europe was in a position to assume a larger share of the cash burden.

The reason why most of our partners play the stay-at-home roles is obvious, but not mentioned in the white paper. It is noted, in passing, "that Europe is still probably the most sensitive point in the East-West balance of power." This being the case, most NATO commanders must still think in terms of Soviet divisions on their frontiers and cannot, accordingly, concentrate on the more attractive defence themes which loom so large in Mr. Macdonald's first 32 pages.

Non-military Challenges

Thus we find on page eight that non-military challenges to Canada's sovereignty and independence may arise during the 1970s. "While deterring war is not an objective Canada alone can achieve, and is therefore one which must be pursued through collective security arrangements, the other challenges to sovereignty and independence must be met exclusively by Canada, the provision of adequate Canadian defence resources for this purpose must therefore be a matter of first priority."

Given a choice between the Russians and a non-military threat, what commander would choose the Russians?

The logical conclusion, it seems to me, is that Mr. Macdonald should concentrate on recruiting lawyers. Surveillance and control are key white paper words. We seem however, to be stronger on the former than on the latter, possibly because the control part is more likely to upset people.

Violations

One grasps quite readily what the armed forces are supposed to spot: territorial violations; infringements of Canadian laws; pollution which might disturb our balanced ecology. "Incidents may involve, for instance, a fishing vessel, an oil tanker or a private aircraft." The difficulty is that our mare nostrums are considered open sea by certain other governments, especially that of the United States. It does appear that, if our forces are to control the Americans, they will need all the lawyers Mr. Macdonald is capable of scraping up.

As the minister candidly commented at the press conference, the armed forces have been passing through a difficult period. This is understandable since the new roles appear to call for longer explanations every week. In the not distant past we had an army, a navy and an air force. We now have an important reservoir of skills and capabilities: a resource which may be used to carry out essentially non-military projects of high priority and importance to national development: a catalyst to stimulate the introduction of new techniques into Canadian industry."

To cap it all, behind the man in uniform, is a volume of defence purchases which assist in the attainment of the government's objective of regional economic equality. Whether one is a corporal or field marshal, all this calls for a good deal of adjustment. It is not surprising to read that there is going to be a change of emphasis. We are now going in for versatile forces and multi-purpose equipment rather than a high degree of specialization. Multiple tasking is to be the watchword in recognition possibly of the government's rapidly changing objective and the endless variety of our non-military foes.

The white paper contains little that was not expected. It has been decided, after an argument with the Americans, to abandon the Bomarcs although not for the hygienic reasons cited in much political discussion. (The Voodoos will retain nuclear weapons since, without them, they would be ineffective in intercepting bombers with nuclear loads.)

The argument is that Bomarcs once had an important dual purpose, shielding North America and protecting the deterrent. But against missiles, no comprehensive system for protecting the cities now exists while the deterrent, based largely in the West, is little helped by distant and vulnerable Bomarcs at North Bay and La Macaza.

This might suggest that we need more interceptors, although the government has been able to resist the idea. A deterrent to any such conclusion is the hope that the SALT talks will induce the Russians to retire their bombers: in which case, presumably, the Voodoos will follow them into oblivion.

CF 5s for Emergencies

As was also expected the CF 5s are to be kept available for service in emergency on NATO's northern flank.

Elsewhere on the NATO front, our small force — now in reserve — is being reshaped for its new duties. Its Centurions are to be retired in favor of air transportable, light armored vehicles for reconnaissance, possibly the Scorpions now used by British forces.

Thus the downward reshaping continues, although relatively minor decisions and inflation have combined to impose some check. Numerically, the forces will comprise some 83,000 personnel and be freed in two stages from the freeze imposed on the department.

Mr. Macdonald does not anticipate further white papers in the 1970s. For the time being, at least, one operation lift is deemed sufficient for the armed forces. The prospect of another paper would probably be more than they could stand.

WHEN IT DOESN'T WORK

By ART STOTT

A Lesson From Older Indian Schools?

WHEN the federal government some years ago launched its intensive effort to educate Indians and Eskimos of the Northwest Territories into the current century, several problems arose. Because the communities were widely scattered, it was necessary to bring many away from their homes to take up residence in the schools. In the classes, according to some critics, they were taught subjects divorced from their traditional life styles and when they left, usually as dropouts in the early grades, they were equipped inadequately either for the competitive life and different society of modern Canada, or for a return to the life their forefathers had followed. They were caught between the two cultures.

Stott

The results were not entirely negative. The young Indians and Eskimos did advance, over a period of time, to higher grades before quitting. Moreover, when they returned home, some of the influences of a slightly higher education and exposure to the white Canadian way of life rubbed off onto their parents, with improvements in housekeeping, sanitation and health.

Identity in Education

Federal authorities have recognized the minimal benefits of the system they were following and have amended it. Now efforts are being made to bring into the classroom instruction that bears a direct relationship to the language, culture and environment of the Indians and Eskimos. If, as Indians claimed in criticism of reading texts, they did not know the familiar primer personalities "Dick and Jane", they were given something and somebody whom they did know as subjects in the readers.

In British Columbia, and perhaps elsewhere, the processes of change have gone even further. With assistance from government, Indians who know only English as a written language, may soon be taught their own tongues. In an interesting experiment, their folk lore is being preserved and will be transmitted to them. This should give them a better understanding of who they are and a fuller appreciation of their background.

Good for Whites Too

If this is good for Indians, conceivably the technique may be good for white people, whom, we are told, suffer now from the divisiveness of the generation gap and a breakdown in communication between the young and their elders.

You can get an argument on that. A number of adults of my age find little difficulty in communicating with young people and, making allowances for change, don't feel themselves set apart from teen-agers by an unbridgeable chasm.

Still, there are some young people who opt out of the world of their elders for a world, often fanciful, of their own. We're prone to rationalize the development as something inevitable in a new era that has come to know the atomic bomb and human entry into space.

It seems a dubious rationalization to me. Most youngsters, in my opinion, don't know much more about the atom than I do — certainly not as much as the people approaching my generation who have conducted the research on it. Nor will they be any deader than I'll be if somebody sets off the big bang in my vicinity. As for space, the science and technology of adventures in that field call for preparation which most young people haven't had time to make.

Easy Rationalization

So perhaps we should toss out a few of the rationalizations that seek to explain the separation of the generations, now frequently more assertive than it was in earlier ages. Maybe we should look a little at the educational system to see if it is encouraging a divisiveness that is unnecessary. Could it be that our educative processes — and they extend beyond the schools — are cultivating among some young people an inability to cope with realities as they exist and, with amendments both in degree and kind, have existed for a very long time? Could it also be that many of the young are growing up without viable substitutes for the way of living they reject? Are they, metaphorically, the young Indians inadequately trained to make the transition to conditions of today and at the same time trained out of the ability to exist in the traditional society of their elders?

You hear harsh criticism these days of transient youth hitch-hiking a ride in automobiles which, to some of them, are the symbols of a materialist society they profess to despise. Like most generalities, the criticism is too all-embracing. But if there is a point to it, the point seems to be that such young people have not learned to adjust themselves to certain realities as they exist today.

Pragmatism in Moderation

It would be tragic if the idealism of youth were so blighted by pragmatism that it perished — that the search by youth for perfection, no matter how unattainable, was blocked by an insurmountable wall of reality. But a sense of balance might help. For a number of the present generation, we don't seem to be providing the means of attaining that balance.

Maybe we can learn from the Indians and the Eskimos that an educational system which seemed good doesn't work as well as had been expected. We're shirking a responsibility if we offer no acceptable alternative to the opt-outs who wander off into limbo, as a number seem to be doing.

Ol' Vic Says:

Al Uncle Zeke's bin floatin' his currency fer years in bottles.

A good deal o' th' so-called generation gap is t'tween people's ears.

If drugs fer youngsters w'd solve all their problems it w'd be a good idea. But does anybody really think it will?

Customs Station Next?

May I comment on Mr. Bennett's action in removing the Maple Leaf Trans-Canada road signs in a way to "stop" the trans-Canada highway at the B.C. Border?

This is old hat for Mr. Bennett. He once said the Rockies separated Canada from British Columbia. Now he has made it official.

It has also made a mockery of his statement that we are all unhyphenated Canadians. His road sign action leaves one wondering if his next project will be a customs station at the Alberta-B.C. border.

May I offer a reminder of the Victoria Times editorial of Monday, February 8, 1971 referring to Mr. Bennett's split personality?

One can only wonder if this is a new one or the widening of an old one. It looks like a new addition to me.—Len Skelton, 4068 Grange.

Told in Jest

I have just read the very interesting article in the August 24 edition of the Times, "The Bed, an Analysis." I was cited throughout the article as the local psychologist who suggests that a person's preference for style and size of bed is a good indicator of basic emotional needs. I find the article very amusing, since my comments were made with tongue-in-cheek. A newspaper article featuring beds struck me at the time as a much needed stimulant for some chuckles and a belly-laugh or two. It was in the spirit of humor that I offered some facetious interpretations of why people choose the beds that they do. I did not anticipate that my ridicule of pseudo-psychology might be taken seriously by those who read the Times. I have already received one phone call from a troubled wife who, along with her husband, appear to have taken my satire as truth, and which has generated a crisis in her marriage.

To put my reaction plainly, my interpretations of why people prefer different beds were offered in fun and have no basis either in fact or in any theory of psychology to which I subscribe.

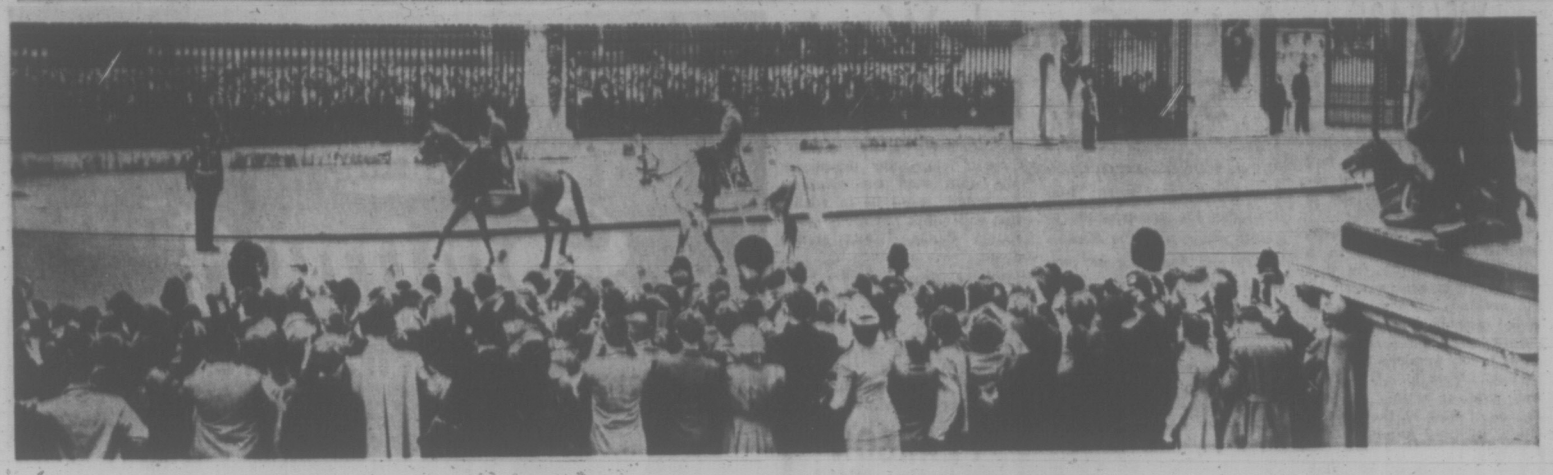
I am somewhat disturbed and embarrassed that what I was saying in an interview with the Times' reporter was offered clearly in a spirit of fun and satire but was printed with an aura of seriousness and authority. I hope your readers (not to mention bed salesmen) will be assured that the choice of a bed is dictated by a variety of factors, such as the need for comfort, individual sleeping habits, how much one can afford to invest in bedroom furniture, medical prescription, size and style of the bedroom, individual aesthetic taste, and often a mutual compromise between sleeping partners (when more than one person shares the same bedroom).

I do not believe seriously that sleeping in a king-size, queen-size, twin, water, or any other kind of bed is related in any way to some mystical yearning to return to the womb — or the Garden of Eden, for that matter. Quite on the contrary, I personally would choose a mechanical, water-filled, hexagonal, emperor-sized bed if my pocketbook, my wife, and my bedroom would allow. — H. Edward Tryk, Ph.D., Department of Psychology, University of Victoria.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of August 27, 1911:

Completing the finest trip she has ever had to Prince Rupert and Stewart, the Grand trunk steamer Prince Rupert, with Capt. Duncan McKenzie on the bridge, arrived in port early yesterday morning. Although fog is generally prevalent during this season of the year, the Rupert encountered none at all. The sea was as smooth as a mill-pond and Queen Charlotte Sound, which for the greater part of the year is pretty lively, was as smooth as glass.



Buckingham Palace crowds: A palace or palladium?

Swarming Tourists Milked, Despised

By V. S. PRITCHETT

(From a BBC radio broadcast later printed in The Listener.)

Up to about forty years ago there used to be a human type called the traveller. He or she went off — generally on their own or with a friend or someone called a guide or dragoman — to some very little known country where they saw extraordinary sights and perhaps suffered hardships.

Yet they enjoyed it all and were interested in it all, and the only thing against it was that they probably quarrelled with their friends.

No one really travels now. We're all tourists. We swarm by the coachload everywhere.

Natives Are Laughing

The natives laugh at us; they are delighted by the millions of pounds or dollars or marks or whatever it is we bring into their countries, but privately they dislike our voices, our manners and the way we swamp their favourite bars, hotels, restaurants, hairdressers, shops, theatres, cinemas, historic places and beaches as though we own them.

It's true that our interest is flattering, but underneath they despise us. 'Tourists,' they say, scornfully.

What is it fundamentally that they dislike about us? Well, I think the answer is simple. We can see it when, instead of being tourists, we become in our turn the toured, the people subject to tourism.

Last summer it was startling to hear an English voice in the centre of London, which was simply taken over. We could bear it in our hypocritical way because, rather shamefacedly, we were raking in the money, but there's a real resentment here, which goes very deep into human nature and human dignity.

Tourists are curious and they wish to be amused, and none of us likes to be treated as a curiosity. Even more primitive is the dislike, even the fear and anger, of being looked at. Above all, by strangers.

In peasant countries it is still common to see someone, as you're going down the street, make a gesture when he sees the stranger coming towards him: he is averting the evil eye. The stranger has all the insinuation of an alien culture which we instinctively resist.

It is common, as we know, for primitive people to dislike being photographed, fearing that their image will be used for the purpose of hostile magic. We laugh at that superstition of theirs because we consider ourselves to be quite above it, to be in fact the civilized norm, but what happens when someone takes a picture of ourselves, in our folk costume of, say, bowler hat and umbrella, or long hair, short dresses or long ones?

What, we say, as the cameras click, is so peculiar about us? What an insult to treat us as if we were simply picturesque.

We're not picturesque: we are living our own lives in our own way. What is this stranger but a peeping Tom? What right has he to intrude on the privacy of our lives and persons?

And just as it's difficult to relax, to be ourselves, when we are photographed or stared at, something absurd often happens to us when tourists are about.

We have seen the Irish turn into stage Irishmen when foreigners go to Ireland. Equally some of us become stage Englishmen: hotel porters set up as Dickens characters as if they've been reading him up the night before, hundreds of Podsnaps appear, uttering pompous and inaccurate information about London.

We swell with complacency, or whine with self-denigration. We even show off and tell the tourist all we know about his country.

Innocent Welcome

The old-style traveller was either innocently welcomed, or pitied for his loneliness, admired for his extraordinary or incomprehensible effort (why cross the desert or the mountains? and so on), or he was frankly treated as a spy, which he sometimes was, and even put in jail. He was a rare being.

The tourist is not rare. He swarms. He's an example of mass human pollution.

I've lately stayed in the isolated cottage of a famous writer, now dead, and we were pestered every day by tourists, who not only invaded the garden without asking but were found in the house, even clicking their cameras in our bedroom.

It's true they were mostly Americans, who are born without a sense of privacy. No doubt they were nice enough, and we have to excuse them because the United States has scarcely ever suffered from the invasion of foreign tourists.

There's nothing new in this. Tens of thousands swarmed to see Simon Stylites on his solitary pillar. The road to Canterbury was from time to time infested by Chaucer's loudly garrulous pilgrims.

I myself have been on coach tours to grottoes and to those caves in Yucatan where virgins had their hearts torn out and were thrown into the water to propitiate the Rain God. The night-clubs enact this for you down in the caverns. I gawped at it, as every tourist gawps.

The awful fact is that the secret human reaction to the strange and to solitude is "Let us go and rape it. Let us get drunk in the Temple of the Sun God. Let us put a night-club on an Alp, and turn beaches into sewage dumps."

Our defence is, well, that we can't help it, we are too many, we are jailed in our hotels and see so little of the country and the lives of the people that we do them no harm.

There is tourist life, and there is real life. We are simply voyeurs; we are enjoying a holiday from life; we are having that rarest of human experiences, a wish fulfilled.

The great difference between the traveller and the tourist is that the tourist scarcely sees the country. He sees a fake which has been carefully set up for him.

But he enjoys that enormously, so long as the weather is good, because his real pleasure comes from his illusions and from his fellow tourists.

'People Pollution' Afflicts London

By VAL SEARS

LONDON — In Westminster Abbey the other day, a lady sat down on the tomb of Elizabeth Percy ("Died 1776. Universally beloved, revered, lamented"), took off her shoes and began dusting her bare feet with powder.

"My God, Marge," she said. "I can't take much more of this."

Neither, it seems, can Londoners.

With more than 7,000,000 tourists coming to Britain this year — most of them visiting or passing through London — the strains of "people pollution" are beginning to affect even this most benign of cities.

There are so many people in Trafalgar Square these days that the pigeons are practically invisible; the Tower of London has queues that go on forever and Westminster Abbey looks like a Toronto supermarket on Saturday morning.

Gone Too Far?

Even Lord Mancroft, chairman of the London Tourist Board, is beginning to question whether the board has not gone too far in encouraging guests.

"It would be a great pity," he argues, "if the tourist invasion were to increase at such a rate as to damage one of the greatest attractions — the friendliness of London citizens.

"If Londoners are unable to enjoy their own theatre shows or cannot obtain a seat in their favorite restaurant, then there will be complaints," Lord Mancroft said. "It is a short step from that state of affairs to one of active resentment."

Already 80 per cent of the tickets to shows in London are sold to tourists. Foreigners account for 20 per cent of the total gate at the London Zoo.

Explosion of Fumes

One of the most disturbing phenomena of the tourist invasion is the area around Buckingham Palace where, every morning with an explosion of diesel fumes more than 80 huge buses leave their parking space to trundle tourists around to the sights of the city.

At the palace itself, only about 5,000 of the 15,000 daily visitors can get a decent look at the changing of the guard. (In fact, the guard has temporarily stopped changing because Britain has run out of soldiers to send to Northern Ireland.)

There is even pressure for two guard changes a day to let more people have a look.

But Lord Mancroft objects: "This is a palace, not the Palladium," he says.

Amid the growing babel of German, Japanese, Dutch and American voices, the flat sound of a Canadian accent is a little muted this year.

Change Pub Hours

After a peak 408,000 visitors from Canada in 1970, the high commissioner's office in London is recording a slight drop-off this summer.

However mixed Londoners' feelings about foreigners may be — and the fact they bring in over $1 billion a year adds to the mix — the visitors are having an increasing impact on the British way of life.

There are moves afoot to change pub hours so they stay open all day. "Instant membership" in gambling clubs is growing. And the London skyline is dotted with American-style hotels.

Pressure on London housing space is enormous as landlords turn more than 1,000 bed spaces a year into hotel use. And with $12 a week for a bed-sitter now becoming $12 a night for a hotel, the profits are considerable.

10 Million

The government, until recently, gave away almost $60 million in grants to encourage new hotel building, but the enthusiasm for house-to-hotel conversions was so great that the Greater London Council had to object.

The British Travel Association is aiming for 10 million tourists by 1973 and possibly 15 million by 1980.

By that time, visitors to London are likely to be greeted by the same warning that once met tourists arriving in Oxford: "Beware, these ruins are inhabited."

Doctors Must Abandon Elitist Professional Role

By DONALD WASYLENKI

(Wasylenki is associate editor of Interface, a publication of the Student Medical Society of the University of Saskatchewan Medical College, in which this article first appeared. It was later reprinted in The Medical Post.)

Medicine is a profession. It is a small, well-organized, self-interested community which, by virtue of its knowledge-power, oppresses the much larger community which allows it to exist. The idea of a profession is incompatible with outside supervision.

Physicians are bound by a sense of elitist identity. They are permanent members of a closed community, so that their primary allegiances are to the values of that community. They share a common language which is not understood by outsiders and they guard their knowledge and skills jealously.

The professional community exerts power over its members and role definitions for both members and non-members are agreed upon and enforced.

The principle of accountability extends only to the profession and not beyond. It is a community ostensibly founded upon an ideal of service, and this ideal has become a justification for many policies and subsidiary goals.

The professional stands at the apex of prestige in the occupational system. Because the profession rigidly controls admission to training as well as professional behavior and because it posseses a monopoly of very vital skills, the members obtain incomes much higher than those of other occupations.

And there are other advantages. Professions enjoy exploitative opportunities in society. Problems brought to the professional are those that the client cannot solve. And after the work is done, the client is not usually competent to judge if it was done properly.

In the face of client or lay community charges, the profession protects its members by closing ranks. It also offers advantages to its members by structuring professional practice so that insiders will generally fare better than outsiders in spite of client judgments.

●

It is clear that professionalism has arisen in response to the knowledge explosion with its corollary of specialization.

What is not clear, however, is the legitimacy of a very small group, on the basis of its possession of specialized knowledge, controlling the provision of services based on that knowledge in the community at large. This becomes particularly important when one considers the conflict of interest involved.

The conflict of interest arises when the needs of the recipient of professonal services are seen as secondary to the profession, even though the profession apparently exists only to provide service.

By virtue of his selection, training and communal instincts described above, the physician's primary loyalty will be to the profession and so the conflict of interest is inevitable. What is good for the profession is good for the individual member, often at the expense of the larger community.

The ultimate objective of the profession and thus of its individual members must be to "medicalize" the world — for then would the power of the profession be absolute.

As a result of their professional characteristits, members become more and more isolated from the larger community. This occurs, and indeed is encouraged, during the training period and on into professional life.

It is a well-known fact that members of a profession not only train and work together, but they also socialize together and spend very little time with non-professional people. The consequence of all this is that they become less and less aware of developing factors within the larger community which are relevant to their function therein.

As a further consequence of this isolation the community at large becomes less able to scrutinize the profession. The professional mystique heightens and the community functions entirely independent of the people it ostensibly serves.

●

What is occurring now is inevitable — gaps have risen between the profession and society and society's relationship to the profession is characterized by concern, suspicion and indignation.

The fragmentation of 20th century society has undoubtedly been contributed to by professionalism. The alienation of man-as-client from responsible knowledge about himself, his environment and the forces which shape his existence is the essence of professionalism. Communities within communities outside of communities.

Professionalism is a divisive and destructive force by which small groups protect their own self-interests and reject control by the community at large. It is disguised commercialism. Professional groups lose sight of service ideals and the concomitant principle of accountability to society.

Health is a right. Rights are theoretically guaranteed by governments, and the political mandate resides always with the people. As man becomes more sophisticated and more socially concerned he demands greater participation in and control over essential services.

This concept of the outsider, the non-member, the un-initiated meddling in the affairs of the chosen few is totally foreign to the structure of professions. Community and individual self-determination will bring about the demise of professionalism in the years to come.

The concept of community control of community health has arisen in reaction to lack of accountability by the medical profession. This means that non-physicians are demanding policy and budgetary control of all health institutions, facilities and services. The community would control licensing, accreditation and education.

●

It means the end of the elitist professional role in which physicians prescribe the structure of health services. It recognizes the fact that providers of health care are accorded the privilege of serving the larger community and thus are always accountable to it.

Broadly representative community groups, composed of a majority of non-physicians, will replace the profession to guarantee health for the people. Already governments have moved in this direction.

Deprofessionalization must come from within as well as from without. Physicians must begin to question "professional standards."

Professional skills must be delegated and transferred where necessary. Services must meet societal and not professional needs.

Medical information and education must be available to everyone in understandable language and medical education must be free from professional control.

And most importantly, mutuality must replace the professional mysticism of the doctor-patient relationship.

Hopefully, physicians will freely abandon the medical profession and take their place as responsible, accountable, equal members of a self-determining community. Then only will they provide medicine for the people.

The Busy Beaver Has Had His Day

By JOHN NICHOL

If Canadian nationalism is ever to reach full flower, something will have to be done about the beaver. It's a sad thing to have to say, but as a national symbol he just isn't good enough anymore. We all know that our beaver is honest and hardworking, a loyal spouse, and an excellent parent, and he has served us well. But it's all too late now.

Think for a moment of the national symbols that other countries enjoy. There is the Russian Bear, for instance, and the American Eagle. Remember the British Lion! Think of the symbol of modern France — that strapping female patriot — topless among the flames of revolution, holding the tricolor aloft. These are symbols to stir men's blood. (Some more than others, of course, depending on whether one's taste runs to bears or topless patriots.)

If we compare him to these dramatic symbols, then, fond as we are of our dear-old beaver, we have to admit that a change is due. Perhaps it is possible to visualize a topless beaver holding the Canadian flag above the barricades—but somehow the vision is not inspiring.

★ ★ ★

We could try to do with our beaver what the British did with their lion. They have carved their lion on the steps of public buildings around the world. Again — it would certainly be possible to carve gigantic beavers with teeth the size of shoe boxes, and put them up here and there, but strangers might take them for muskrats or whistling marmots and we would all waste time explaining basic rodent biology to tourists.

The American symbol, of course, is the bald eagle. This great bird is admired and respected in the states in which it is extinct. In those few states which harbor the last survivors, however, it is shot from helicopters for molesting sheep.

Here the beaver is one up. No one has ever accused the Canadian beaver of molesting sheep — or topless patriots, for that matter. Thus beavers are not shot from helicopters. Instead, they are trapped to make hats and coats, and there's not much glory in that.

Nelson Eddy?

The trouble with the beaver, furthermore, is that he really isn't very aggressive. When he senses danger, he slaps his tail on the water and dives down to enter his house by a secret underwater tunnel. He sits and eats birch twigs until danger has passed. We must face the fact that he presents a lousy image for a nation with any sense of destiny.

★ ★ ★

So what do we do? Perhaps we can look for a new symbol. But that's not easy. Moose? Elk? Caribou? They are all too big and slow. Bears are already taken. The walrus might be good — he is strong and free and he lives in the True North. But he is ugly as sin and his breath is terrible, they say, because he feeds on molluscs. And if this is so, then how could he get along with a topless patriot?

Or we can change the image of the beaver. We can destroy all old photographs and produce posters of a new beaver — tall and slim, with flashing eyes, corrected teeth, and strong chin . . . a furry Nelson Eddy.

Luckily, this isn't a big problem for either Canadians or the beaver, but, as our summer draws to a close, in these golden days between the death of the last black fly and the birth of the first blizzard, it is something to ponder.

Inquest to Open Into Car Death

An inquest opens tonight into the death of a 23-year-old Ontario man killed Thursday in a rear-end collision on the Patricia Bay Highway at Sidney.

Sidney RCMP identfied the dead man as William Woodland Curry, of Orangevalle, Ont. Police said he was the driver of a small foreign car that drove into the back of a vehicle from Oregon.

Coroner G. A. Gerrie is to start the inquest at Sands Funeral Chapel, 1803 Quadra, at 7:30 p.m.

Lorraine McDonald, in her early 20's, of Shelbourne, Ont., is in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital with a broken jaw.

She was a passenger in the Curry car, police said.

The driver of the Oregon car was Richard L. Rude, 42, of Auburn, Wash., police said. He was not hurt.

The collison occurred about 9:30 a.m. Thursday as Rude was attempting to turn from the highway on to Weiler Avenue.

Police said both vehicles were travelling north at the time.

Cigarette Fire Cause

A smouldering cigarette in a locked trailer is believed the cause of a $500 fire this morning at Purvis-Flack Trailer Sales Ltd., 1915 Quadra.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said the cigarette is thought to have been left by persons viewing the vehicle on the sales lot Thursday.

Firemen were called at about 5:45 a.m. today to fight the blaze in the trailer.

Coates said damage to furnishings was heavy.

Stiffer Measures On Oil Spills Urged

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. William Ford, director of the nearby Bedford Institute of Oceanography, said Thursday stiffer measures will have to be taken if oil is to be prevented from entering the oceans.

Dr. Ford, speaking at an oil pollution workshop here, said four vessels from the institute were studying oil pollution in the high seas.

He said it had been learned that some of the oil which escaped from the tanker Arrow in Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay had turned up on Sable Island nearly 200 miles offshore. Oil from the barge Irving Whale which sank north of Prince Edward Island had been found on the Magdalen Islands.

The amount of oil being carried by ships was rising spectacularly. Shipping tonnage was increasing, and 15 to 20 per cent of oil now was produced from offshore wells.

NEED STIFF PENALTIES

"Preventive measures will have to be stiffened up to prevent increasing amounts of oil from entering the seas," said Dr. Ford.

There was evidence of oil floating around in the sea. No one knew how much. Bermuda believed it had a pollution problem on its beaches where oil was washed in. The same was occurring in the Mediterranean.

In tests made between the Azores, oil was picked up in every sampling. A net, with an opening a couple of feet square was towed for about two nautical miles. Every sample had produced oil from the sea surface.

Tar lumps, globules about the size of a thumb nail, some bigger with barnacles growing on it were picked up in every sample taken in the western Atlantic, he said.

The oceans needed monitoring to determine distribution of oil. Despite nations "putting the screws" on tanker fleets and other ships, and other nations taking unilateral action, as Canada has done, it was not known whether the constraints were enough or too much.

CANADIANS DOING JOB

Canadian vessels now are collecting oil samples on the high seas—the Hudson off the Azores, the Sackville in the St. Lawrence, the Dawson off Thule and the Baffin near the Northwest Passage.

Samples taken in Arctic waters had so far been clean, but by the Azores oil was found in every tow.

Dr. Ford said no one knew the fate of the floating tar lumps. He was not certain in his own mind there was a pollution problem on the high seas. "We need to find out."

Dr. David Scarrat, marine biologist for the Fisheries Research Board at St. Andrew's, N.B., undertook diving in Chedabucto Bay after the Arrow incident and found "oil had dropped like cow pats, ballasted by sand to the bottom."

He said he found no evidence bunker oil had contributed to the death of any animal below the tidal level.

LOBSTERS HIT HARD

However, current laboratory tests indicated lobster larvae were significantly affected. Venezuelan crude oil had delayed their development and diminished survival rate.

Sedimentary geologist Dr. Georges Drapeau said it could be years before changes could be measured in the oil beyond the area of wave action. Waves brought tremendous energy to the seashore and assisted in the erosion and dispersal of the oil.

It was impossible to know the quantity of oil remaining buried in the sand. A clean looking sand beach could still make a sunbather dirty if he lay on it.

The inter-tidal zone suffered the brunt of the pollution, said Dr. Martin Thomas, professor of biology at the University of New Brunswick.

CLAMS KILLED

Barnacles were "doing fine," but 70 per cent of clams had been killed off in some areas. Periwinkles became sick but did not die. Shallow water fish—sculpins, gunnels and sea snails, which provide feeding for larger fish—suffered high death rate.

Seaweed had not recovered where oil persisted at high tide level. Some areas of salt marsh cord grass were completely killed off. From 45 plants per square metre, abundance had plummeted to nil.

The growth of cord grass and eel grass was much sparser this year than last year in contaminated areas. Its reproduction was "vitally important ecologically."

The clam situation was still critical. "Seventy per cent of the population in the tested areas are dead," said Dr. Thomas.

27 Protest Zoning for Inn

Residents turned out in force Thursday night to protest a bid to rezone land near the Bakerview subdivision on Rideau Avenue in North Saanich.

Most of the 27 people at the meeting were reportedly from the subdivision where residents are opposed to a proposal which would rezone the land—near McTavish Road and the Pat Bay Highway—from residential to inn zoning.

Mayor J. B. Cumming said council would make a decision on the proposal Sept. 7.

Torpedo Hits Sub

CANBERRA (Reuter) — The Australian submarine Otway aws hit by a practice torpedo during fleet exercises off the New South Wales coast, a navy spokesman said Friday. The spokesman said submarine received slight superstructure damage duging the incident Thursday morning. The torpedo was dropped by a land-based helicopter.

WELFARE PAY-OUT

Oak Bay residents were forced to pay almost three times as much for welfare in the first half of 1971 as they would have done if they had been assessed strictly on the basis of what council paid to recipients.

The reason for the apparent inequity, as explained in a city hall newsletter, is that welfare costs are charged by the province on a per capita basis, without regard to the number of welfare cases existing in any municipality.

Thus, although only $53,843 was paid in claims by Oak Bay as of June 30, the amount billed by the province was $153,864.

The percentage of Oak Bay's tax dollar required for welfare rose from 2.58 six years ago to 6.14 in the first half of this year, the newsletter reported.

Action Canada Wants Socred, PC Ties

About 50 Victoria members of Paul Hellyer's Action Canada movement were told Thursday the group wants to get together with the Conservative and Social Credit parties across the country.

Further information disclosed Hellyer's movement hopes to run its own cadidates in the next federal election and that an election can be expected as early as November.

The group has previously been described as a non-party, with no indication of a leaning toward particular political ideologies.

At the organizational meeting of the two local federal constituencies at the Inn on Cook, Vancouver organizer Jim Janz said the election movement could be in coalition with other parties or that Action Canada could stand alone.

"What we're trying to do now is get together with the Conservatives and Social Creditors across the country, and we're saying: 'Are you going to run a candidate? If not, we'll run ours'."

Man, Tugboat Set For Happy Times

By DONNA CLEMENTS

CROFTON — Two 50-year-olds — a man and a tugboat — have years of cruising and fishing to look forward to since they met more than two years ago.

They both need each other.

Ben Olsson, of Chemainus, a mechanic at Stuart Channel wharves, Crofton, said it was a dream come true when he bought the shell of a 49-foot tugboat.

After years of hauling lumber barges between the Fraser River and the Strait of Georgia, the tug was forced to retire after she tipped over and sank while pushing a log barge just outside the inner harbor at Nanaimo three years ago.

Dirty Condition

She sat on the ocean floor for three days until divers salvaged her with a derrick, towed her to Vancouver and removed her engine. Nanaimo Marine Services said they assessed the damage and decided to leave the tug "in her oily, messy, engineless contion" and sell her.

Olsson bought the tug, changed the name from the Gander to Neptune, and restored her to life.

He said he spent more than a year digging dirt and oil grime out of all sections of the boat before he could even start to paint her. Now the Neptune is bright and shiny with a new D-Six Caterpillar engine that pushes her at five knots an hour. Olsson plans to change the pitch on the propeller to make her go seven knots.

Olsson and the Neptune went on their first long trip together two weekends ago when he chugged to a salmon derby at Gibson's Landing.

"This is a great hobby," Olsson said. "This winter I plan to renovate the interior to be really modern while I retain the classic look of the tug on the outside.

$5,000 Cost

"Although by the time I am finished it would have cost me about $5,000, that's with me doing all the labor and getting deals on parts and everything. I look upon this project as an investment worth more than $20,000."

Olsson said money could never buy the joy and anticipation he has felt since buying the Neptune. Not only does he look on the Neptune as a haven during his still far-off retirement, but Olsson, his wife Gertrude, and his son Clas have already planned weekend trips and look forward to the tug being their summer home.

"It is a crime to live by this much water and not have a boat," Olsson said. "There is a lot of beauty to discover around Vancouver Island and the smaller islands."

Taking Course

This is just what Olsson plans to do after he completes a power squadron course in Duncan next winter to acquaint himself with navigation and other techniques in manoeuvring his prize possession.

Olsson said he has always wanted to own a tugboat since coming to Canada from Sweden 14 years ago.

"When I was taking the ferry from Vancouver the first thing that struck me was that the tugboats looked so alive. They seemed so stubborn and determined while tugging and working away. This really appealed to me."

Olsson said the encouragement he received from Chemainus Towing, which gave him advice and parts, and his employer, who allowed him to dock his boat on his wharves and gave him weekend passes so he could work on her, played a big part in the success of his project.

The Neptune was built at New Westminster in 1920. She was called the Trojan II.

She has been owned by Aitken Tug and Barge and Gulf of Georgia Towing in Vancouver. The latter company rebuilt her and named her the Gander before selling her to Nanaimo Marine Services.

BOTH TUG and owner Ben Olsson are 50 years old. The owner-mechanic, who lives at Crofton, considers the Neptune a dream come true. He put a lot of work into renovating the tug, and more is scheduled. The tug recently went on her first big trip, successfully. (Donna Clements Photo.)

FEE PLEA HEARD

Money Vote Set

DUNCAN — Despite a volunteer ambulance drivers' appeal for reduction of service rates, Cowichan Valley Regional directors decided to go ahead with a vote on an ambulance service by-law Sept. 25 as planned.

Directors said Thursday they would negotiate a new ambulance service fee structure at a later date.

The 18 volunteer ambulance drivers said they want reduced ambulance fees in order to eliminate hardship for individuals.

After the meeting a spokesman for the group, David Munro, said "some old people in this area would rather eat dogfood than not be able to pay their bills."

Munro said an annual tax levy of $2.50 per $8,000 assessed house rather than the planned 50 cents would enable the regional district to reduce service fees drastically.

He said instead of a local service call costing up to as much as $27.50, individuals would have to pay only $5.

A transfer to Victoria would cost $35 against $60.

The vote on the ambulance by-law will be held in all areas within the Cowichan school district except Chemainus, Crofton and Westholme. It asks taxpayers to give the regional board permission to take over the administration of the present ambulance facilities here.

The Duncan Kiwanis Society who currently operate the service, said it no longer wants the responsibility and if the administration is not taken over all services will stop. The volunteer drivers said they would stay on.

The by-law must pass in all areas. Director H. A. Warner of Mill Bay said if the proposed by-law is changed now he fears it will be defeated in his area.

Director David Laverock of Shawnigan Lake suggested the drivers carry on as planned for another year to give the board a chance to devise an acceptable fee structure.

Special Rules Likely to Apply On Waterfront

Special rules for development along the Inner Harbor waterfront will apply if city council finally passes a bylaw introduced Thursday.

The bylaw declares all the waterfront land from the Johnson Street bridge to the Bapco Paint factory at the west end of Belleville to be a special "development area" in which normal building rules do not apply.

For development in the area, council can enter into land contracts with the builder, binding him to build exactly according to specific plans. Normally a builder has wide discretion within certain rules.

Under the development area legislation, the city and builders may negotiate aspects of a building without being tied to normal restrictions. However, once the plans are approved by council no changes are allowed without later consent.

A hearing at city hall will be held Sept. 9 at which members of the public may comment on the proposal.

Unwelcome Residents 'Deported'

Thousands of the city's least-liked residents are being shipped to the prairies in tobacco cans — all in the name of research.

Prof. Cedric Gillott of the University of Saskatchewan is studying the damp-wood termite, found in Canada only in coastal B.C.

As subjects for his studies, Gillott gets the termites, a few thousand at a time, in tobacco cans from Douglas Wood (that's right, Wood), of 3314 Fulton, a University of Victoria biology student. Wood has been keeping the professor supplied for 3½ years.

Termites found elsewhere in Canada are of the dry-wood variety.

Gillott is in Victoria attending the week-long annual meeting of the Entomological Society of Canada.

Previous work outlined copper-zinc and copper-iron mineralization.

Gr. Lakes

Great Lakes Paper Co. has cut its October dividend 50 per cent to 10 cents a share because of lower earnings and need to maintain a strong financial position.

THE WEATHER

Skies were generally clear over British Columbia during the night. However patchy cloudiness kept early morning temperatures in the central interior a few degrees higher than yesterday's. At 4 a.m. Prince George was cloudy and 48 compared to clear and 34 at that time on Thursday. A few fog patches were reported in low-lying areas.

An extensive ridge of high pressure just off the B.C. coast promises sunny skies and fairly warm temperatures for most sections of the province today and Saturday.

MRS. DORIS MAXWELL (centre) set off blood-splattered protest

BLOODY COURT HEARING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a violent, blood-spattered court hearing, a Sept. 20 trial date has been set for two surviving Soledad Brothers accused of murdering a prison guard more than 18 months ago.

The club- and fist-swinging melee erupted Thursday after Doris Maxwell, mother of defendant John Clutchette, shouted a vulgarity at the judge in a pre-trial hearing and he ordered her ejected.

Two black men jumped up and struggled with police officers and several black women spectators pushed toward Mrs. Maxwell. All were separated from the judge and defendants by a bulletproof glass partition erected in anticipation of possible trouble.

A dozen police officers rushed in, swinging riot sticks.

Two bailiffs, three policemen, and a spectator were injured in the violence and two men were arrested.

One of those arrested was Philip Jake Price, 35, of Oakland, Calif. Officers hustled him out of the room but he fought his way back moments later with blood streaming from wounds over his eyes.

While baton-wielding officers pushed and knocked several men and women spectators to the floor, Price was pushed down in a corner, handcuffed and led away.

Mrs. Maxwell fell to the floor in the courtroom aisle during the disorder. Police said "she got up and walked out after the thing was over." She was not hurt, police said.

Blood was spattered on the walls and floor of the spectator area.

BOOKED BY POLICE

Price was treated later at hospital and reported in good condition. He was booked for investigation of assault of an officer and resisting arrest.

His brother, Earl M. Price, 27, also was arrested and booked for investigation on the same charges.

Mrs. Maxwell's outburst came in a hearing for Clutchette, 28, and Fleeta Drumgo, 26, before Superior Court Judge Carl M. Allen.

Their co-defendant, George Jackson, 29, was one of six men killed last Saturday in an abortive escape attempt at San Quentin prison. Three white guards and two white convicts also were killed.

The three blacks from Los Angeles were indicted on charges of beating a white guard to death in January, 1970, at Soledad prison near Monterey a few days after a guard had shot three black prisoners to death during what authorites described as a racial brawl in the prison exercise yard.

High-Powered Team Promoting Lewis

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader David Lewis, convinced that the electorate can best be reached through the media and small-group gatherings, is beefing up his staff to help him get his message across.

His new aides, all young and enthusiastic, share his views that the old-fashioned political rallies—the type that former leader T. C. Douglas used to favor—don't represent the best vehicle for getting their leader into power.

Already, the 62-year-old Mr. Lewis has criss-crossed eight of Canada's 10 provinces since he assumed office last April.

He has walked picket lines, talked with citizens groups representing everything from apple prices to high rents, and he has held countless meetings with small groups of workers and supporters.

He has seldom shouted from the podium of mass rallies, except when supporting candidates in provincial elections.

And, unless his plan changes, this is the way he will reach out to the electorate until the next election is held.

THEY WON'T GET RICH

Behind Mr. Lewis, and helping him plan his approach to the people, is a high-powered team of advisers, most of them highly dedicated to their task, and most of them pulling in their belts to absorb the financial losses incurred with their new employment.

One of the strongest advocates of the small-meeting campaigning is Murray Weppler, a 34-year-old former newspaper man, who recently joined the Lewis staff.

Mr. Weppler, who worked for most daily newspapers in Saskatchewan before becoming editor of an English-language paper in Hong Kong, was recently the Queen's Park correspondent for the Ottawa Citizen.

Now executive assistant to Mr. Lewis, he says:

"When David goes out and really meets the people, and listens to their problems, he is being compared with the prime minister. And here is a man practising participatory democracy, not talking about it."

IS ONE OF THREE

Mr. Weppler, a native of St. Boniface, Man., is only one of three newspaper men enlisted for the Lewis team.

R. H. (Bob) Buchanan, 45, had worked on newspapers in Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario before spending 10 years as executive secretary of the Toronto Newspaper Guild. For the past six years he has been publisher and editor of the weekly Banner in Aurora, Ont.

He now is director of communications for the NDP, and will be polishing up the party's printed material, writing speeches and, if present plans are successful, he will publish a regular party magazine.

Working with Mr. Buchanan, but concentrating on Mr. Lewis' press relations, is Lewis Seale, 29, former parliamentary correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail. He is the leader's new press secretary.

Mr. Seale, a native of Quebec City, worked on several Quebec newspapers, including the Montreal Gazette, before joining The Globe and Mail.

There are others, besides newspaper men, adding intellectual muscle to the NDP leader's office here. The most notable of these is Boris Celovsky, 47, who is leaving a senior post with the department of regional economic expansion to become research director for the NDP caucus.

Mr. Celovsky, who came to Canada in 1950 from Czechoslovakia, was said to have taken a very substantial salary cut to join the NDP.

He holds bachelor degrees in law and economics, a master's degree in Canadian history and a doctorate in political science.

Police Disperse Unruly Unionists

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Police with helmets and face shields and carrying long black billies moved in Thursday to disperse 300 shouting union demonstrators outside the Texpack Ltd. plant.

Twelve persons were arrested as the police moved into the obscenity-shouting demonstrators, who ran back from their advance.

They brought to 27, including 16 women, the number arrested in less than 24 hours at the plant which manufactures gauze dressings and other hospital supplies.

The plant was struck by 150 textile workers, mostly women, in July, but has continued in production.

Among those arrested was R. Kent Rowley, national president of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers' Union, on a charge of watching and besetting.

The union, which has no affiliation with international unions with similar names, is not a member of the Canadian Labor Congress. Texpack is a wholly-owned subsidiary of American Hospital Supply Inc.

INJURIES NOT SERIOUS

There were no serious injuries Thursday as police, with a standby force of 40 only minutes away, moved into the demonstrators.

Union members from other cities were at the plant Thursday to demonstrate opposition to an injunction which limits pickets. As they grew unruly and began taunting police, Deputy Sheriff George Campbell read the injunction and warned them to disperse by 4 p.m. or be arrested.

At 4:15 p.m., the 46 police moved into the crowd. There were cries of "pigs" as the police moved forward.

"We're really caught in the middle," said one sweating police official. "I think a bunch of lawyers is really having a lot of fun with us."

He said police do not believe the trouble is over. However, the gathering of 300 was 400 fewer than showed up Wednesday when police and fire vehicles were stoned and a fire was started.

There had been previous skirmishes at the plant, most of them involving non-union workers who enter and leave the plant on buses with wire-mesh windows.

Eric Blackburn, New Democratic Party representative for Brant riding, said Thursday the non-union workers are from Hamilton and are escorted to the plant by police from Hamilton, Ancaster and Brantford.

"We have a unique situation here because the picket line means nothing. There used to be a time when people on strike could peacefully try to influence others.

"But you cannot influence a bus travelling 20 miles an hour. This nullifies the whole idea of pickets. The labor code must be changed."

BILL WALKER

When Herb Bate was younger, he used to toss lumber around at the old Wilfert mill in Esquimalt Harbor. But that was only between softball games.

When Barry Jackson was a moppet, big Wally Smith spotted him one day and said: "Hey kid, how would you like to play for me?"

Well, Herb is now in the construction business, and doing well, thank you. Still between softball games, that is. And Barry is still tossing softballs around, and coaching Herb's team for him.

Both of these careers go back a long way. Herb admits to being interested in softball for 26 years as player, coach, manager and sponsor. Barry was only 16 when the late Wally Smith first plucked him out of Grade 10 and put him on the mound. Monday he celebrates his 38th birthday.

There's an affinity here — a close one. For Herb and Barry next week will shepherd the Bate Construction team to Halifax for the nationals. League president John Oster will go along too. "We've made him business manager," said Herb. "It's too much for me."

"This is what we've been building for," both Herb and Barry admitted. "An awful lot of work has gone into this club," Barry continued. "And we've just got to have a great chance. It's the strongest club in the three years I've been with the team."

●

"How good?

"In the past three years, we've never lost more than two games in a row," Barry said. "This year we had to win two in a row to get the B.C. title. We did. And then we had to win that final game in Edmonton. We've also won the May 24 Invitational, the Strathcona Invitational, the Campbell River Invitational, and our third league championship. Out of 78 games I'd say we lost only 16."

Herb would like to strike it rich for two reasons. He loves softball, and he got close enough to smell the roses in 1969. That was the year the Bate team lost out to Calgary in the regional playdowns.

"My biggest thrill before that was coaching a team to the B.C. junior championship in 1958," he said.

"It has cost a few thousand," Herb admitted of his dream of a national title. Expenses along the tournament trail come high, and Herb figures his final bill this year will be about $6,000."

It was after the B.C. final that Bates picked up the two fellows who are expected to shore up that bid for title status. Both are pitchers. Pete Landers was secured from Campbell River and Lorne Auvache from Vancouver.

"Landers is one of the finest in the country," said Barry. "He's very quick, and faster than Kern of Edmonton. Auvache is a 10-year veteran of several Canadian playoffs."

"We'd like Landers to stay on in town for next year," said Herb. "We'd like to be part of an inter-city league."

●

Both Herb and Barry were quick to heap praise on all the team. The rating briefly went like this: Billy James—most improved, and a good one; Don Lancaster — batting champion; Joe Patterson — Don's able replacement; Bob Boudot — all star in nationals in 1966; Bob Holness — best fielder in western Canada; George Banks — batting champ last year, runner-up this; Doug Boden — coming off a broken ankle; Barry Smith — a good hitter; Ken Bate — fast, and good bat; Harvey Stevenson — "the monster," has hit 11 home runs in past three weeks, 24 on the season.

The pitching staff? Bob Swanson of Nanaimo and Brian Pearce — "both very promising, with their best years ahead," and Ken Larson, also of Nanaimo — "a part timer now, but once one of B.C.'s best."

Which leaves only the club's utility player Lyall Cornett, and the coach to account for.

"Don't forget Cornett," said Barry. "He got us out of B.C. with a pinch-hit single. That tied the score and then Harvey boomed out a home run in the next inning. And getting out of B.C. is the toughest part."

"Besides, he's our assistant coach and reserve catcher."

Actually what happened was that Bates had been knocked into the losers bracket by a Campbell River victory, and the club was on its way to oblivion when Cornett came up with his clutch blow.

●

"We had one out in the seventh and were down by two runs," said Barry. "And sure, Herb was getting excited. He was getting on me to do something. After all, we were only two outs away from all our plans going up in smoke. Well, we finally got a runner on, then another, and Lyall came through; and we won it."

What Barry neglected to explain however, was that Bates, even then, still had to win two games to win the west.

Or that he pitched both those games, a one-hitter in the first, and a three-hitter in the second. Both games were won 1-0.

Of course this was nothing new for him. One year he won 65 while losing only seven in Prince George. Then he played in the world championships in Chicago in 1965. Prince George finished eighth out of 27 that year.

"By the way," Barry added. "The world championships are in Manila next spring. It would be kind of nice if Herb could get to go, wouldn't it?"

Sure would, and big Wally would be proud, too, Barry.

Non-Confidence Charge Fired at Commissioner

By STEWART LANG

Victoria Shamrocks lost the game against Coquitlam Adanacs 18-9 Thursday night in Memorial Arena and, as a result, dropped the best-of-five semi-final series 3-1—but it appears their battles in the Western Lacrosse Association are not quite finished.

Shamrock president Chris Randall and general manager Mason Sheldrick plan to carry their protest over a ruling by commissioner Tom English in the third game of the series one step farther.

It was reported that English allowed Dick Crompton to play in the third game at Coquitlam on Wednesday despite his receiving a match penalty in Sunday night's game in Victoria.

The league has an automatic one-game suspension following a match penalty.

Sheldrick said that English had allowed Crompton to play after reading the referees' report of the game and deciding the one-game suspension was not justified. English was not at the game in question.

English reiterated his stand Thursday by saying: "My decision remains the same as it was."

This was after the Shamrocks submitted a formal letter of protest over the use of what they considered an ineligible player.

Both Randall and Sheldrick stated that the protest was not over the loss of the game, which the use of Crompton didn't affect, but over the principle involved when English stepped in to over-rule the referees.

"The ruling was, as far as I am concerned, completely improper," said Randall.

Randall now plans to follow the advice of Sheldrick, who tried to resign early Thursday but had his letter rejected.

The advice involved calling a meeting of the league governors and asking for a vote of confidence in the commissioner.

"We'll see what the mainland teams think about it," said Randall.

Refs Call 54 Minutes in Penalties

Meanwhile, Shamrocks gave it a good try for the first half Thursday but seemed to gradually wear out in the "chippy" playing conditions before a crowd of 1,195 fans.

Referees Paul Morneau and Harry Ferguson kept tight reign on a game which seemed ready to explode at several points, calling 54 minutes in penalties against both Victoria and Coquitlam. These calls included a match penalty to Don McNeill at 14:59 following a boxing match with Coquitlam's Kerry Gallagher and a game misconduct to Brian Robinson of Adanacs at 16:30 of the third frame after a wrestling match.

Victoria came from behind to tie the game twice in the first period but ended the frame with a 5-3 deficit. By 3:06 of the second period, however, the Irish bounced from behind to take a 6-5 lead at 3:06 on a goal by Mike Beaulac.

Beaulac, who finished the game on top of the Irish scoring sheet with five goals and an assist, started things rolling at 27 seconds with a close-in shot that whistled through Coquitlam netminder Dave Wedlock's legs.

Dennis Somner scored again for Victoria at 34 seconds to tie the score 5-5 and set the stage for Beaulac's go-ahead effort.

Crompton, the controversial player, received a long pass and whirled to blast it past Victoria's Doug Thompson and knot the score 6-6 again at 4:02.

And from then on, Coquitlam was never touched.

Other Shamrocks scorers were Ranjit Dillon, Brent Atkins and Al MacLean.

Charn Dhillon came up with four assists while Somner and Ken Alexander helped on three goals each.

John Allen was the big gun for Coquitlam with four goals and three assists while Gallagher and Keith Scott scored three goals each. Other Adanacs scorers were Les Schumacher (2), Wayne Shuttleworth, Mike Gates, Doug Wallsmith, Wayne Bellwood and Jim Rickbiel.

Wedlock finished the night with 26 stops in the Coquitlam net while Thompson made 31 saves before being replaced by George Grover at 14:46 of the third period. Grover finished with five saves for a combined Victoria total of 36.

Coquitlam, which now enters the playoff final against defending-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies, outmanoeuvred Victoria in the faceoff picture, 36-27.

Runners Continue Playoff Saturday

Victoria Roadrunners will be facing elimination from the provincial midget lacrosse final Saturday when they tackle Vancouver's Hastings Bluebirds at 1 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Bluebirds won the opening game of the best-of-three playoff last weekend in Vancouver and are favored to wrap up the series in two straight games.

THERE WAS PLENTY of rugged action for officials to watch in front of Coquitlam goal at this stage of Western Lacrosse Association playoff game Thursday at Memorial Arena. Referee signals for delayed penalty to Shamrocks as Coquitlam's Les Schumacher (11) is thumped from behind and big Wayne Shuttleworth (2) of Adanacs lays wood on Irish rival. Adanacs, showing too much muscle and hustle, defeated Rocks 18-9 to win semi-final playoff. (Bill Halkett photo)

Scallen Handed Writ; Ginter Seeks Damages

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks' director Tom Scallen, in town Thursday to discuss the operation of the National Hockey League team, got more than just the talking.

Late for the meeting, he walked off the elevator and into the arms of bailiff Clifford Venables, who promptly served him with a writ claiming damages against him and other directors of the club.

Uncle Ben's Tartan Breweries Ltd., owned by Ben Ginter of Prince George, claims damages for fraud or negligence as a result of a transfer of $3 million from Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., which owns the Canucks, to its parent company, Medicor of Minneapolis.

The writ, filed Aug. 17, said a Northwest Sports prospectus did not make a full disclosure of Northwest's financial situation at the time of a public share offering. The brewer said it purchased 3,000 units of Northwest capital stock last year for $675,000 on the basis of the prospectus.

DISCUSS OPERATIONS

Scallen said the meeting itself dealt only with regular operating matters of the Canucks and their Rochester farm team.

Present at the meeting was Vancouver Centre MLA Herb Capozzi, whose family firm lent Medicor $3.5 million to reclaim its majority shares in Northwest when they were placed in trust on orders of the B.C. Securities Commission.

Others present were Canadian directors Cyrus McLean and Coleman Hall. Two other Canadian directors, Frank McMahon and Max Bell, resigned prior to Thursday's meeting.

Sox Change Complexion

By The Associated Press

After 12 straight defeats and the possibility of an embarrassing season sweep by Kansas City Royals, Boston Red Sox were on the verge of becoming the Red Faces.

The complexion suddenly changed, though.

Boston averted a series shutout with a 7-0 triumph over Kansas City Thursday night, whipping the Royals for the first time in a year. The Red Sox lost the last game of 1970 and the first 11 this year.

"All good things must come to an end," philosophized Kansas City manager Bob Lemon.

"There's not much else you can say."

"The odds just caught up with them, the law of averages," said Boston Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko.

CULP HAS SIX-HITTER

The odds may have had something to do about it, but the Red Sox also had something else going for them—Ray Culp. He pitched a six-hitter.

"They had just beaten up on us," said the burly right hander. "They've got a good, young club. It took one of my better nights to get them out."

All the action Thursday night was in the American League as Cleveland Indians trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 10-6, Baltimore Orioles beat the Chicago White Sox 8-7 in a rain-shortened, eight-inning game and Washington Senators drubbed California Angels 8-3.

Seaboard Squares Series With Bates

Bate Construction, the Western Canada senior "A" men's softball champions, met defeat in their own backyard Thursday night at Central Park as they dropped a 6-3 decision to Seaboard Construction that squared the best-of-five Victoria Major Men's final series at one game each.

Seaboard's Glen Bullen held the powerful Bate crew to just four hits while striking out six batters. Bates took a short-lived, three-run lead in the first inning, but Seaboard rallied in the bottom of the opening frame to tie the score and added three more runs in the third.

Muzz Smith and Gary McInnis each tagged two singles for the winners and drove in two runs. Next game of the series will be played Sunday at 2 p.m. at Central.

Bates travel to Halifax on Labor Day weekend in quest of the national senior "A" title.

Former Winner Tackles Champ In Tourney Semi

SAN DIEGO — Defending champion Martha Wilkinson and two-time winner Jane Bastanchury each won two matches Thursday and met today in one semi-final of the Trans-Mississippi women's amateur golf tournament.

Melanie Schiller of Waterloo, Iowa and Leslie Dwyer of Zambia play in the other semi. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver lost in the 16s Thursday to Deborah Skinner of San Diego, 1up. Miss Skinner bowed out in the quarter-finals.

Brenda Reaches Canadian Final

VANCOUVER — Victoria's Brenda Cameron scored two victories here Thursday to advance to the finals of the girls' 14-and-under singles in the Canadian junior open tennis championships at Jericho Tennis Club.

Miss Cameron, the top domestic seed in the 14-and-under group, defeated Vancouver's Anna Maria Font, 6-1, 6-2, in the quarter-finals, and easily disposed Lee Myers of Toronto, 6-2, 6-3 in the semis.

The Victoria player will meet Lisa Nard of Modesto, Calif., in today's final. Miss Nard, the top foreign seed in the girls' 14-and-under category, eliminated Pat Moran Vancouver, 6-0, 6-1, in the other semi-final.

BRADSHAW ADVANCES

Victoria's only other competitor in the tournament, Glen Bradshaw, kept alive his hopes of bringing home a title as he defeated Steve Rogul of Toronto, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, in the quarter-finals of the boys' 14-and-under division. Also advancing to the semi-finals were John Picken of Vancouver, who eliminated Bradshaw from the 16-and-under competition, and Scott Cathcart and Syed Mir, both of Toronto.

Bradshaw and Josef Brabenac of Vancouver lost their bid for a doubles title, losing 4-6, 6-4, 6-1 to Cathcart and Jeff Butler of Toronto.

Miss Cameron was eliminated from the 16-and-under singles by top-seeded Janet Hall of Vancouver, who won, 7-5, 6-1, in the semi-finals. Miss Hall won the quarter-final round by default over Ellen Cates of Vancouver and will meet Miss Nart in the final. Miss Hall also advanced to the 18-and-under semi-finals as she swept past Lesley Harris of Montreal, 6-4, 6-4.

Kid Line Is Reunited

TORONTO (CP) — Long denied his rightful place among hockey's greats, Harvey "Busher" Jackson was inducted into Hockey's Hall of Fame Thursday night.

Jackson, a left winger of Toronto Maple Leafs' famed Kid Line of the 1930s, was one of five former National Hockey League players and builders inducted, bringing the Hall's honor roll to 180.

Others inducted were the late Terry Sawchuk, goaltender with Detroit Red Wings, Boston Bruins, Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers; Ralph "Cooney" Weiland, Boston great of the 1920s; Gordon Roberts, high-scoring winger with Ottawa Senators and builder Arthur Wirtz of Chicago Black Hawks.

Jackson was the last member of the famed Kid Line to be honored at the Hall. Centre Joe Primeau, and right winger Charlie Conacher preceded him.

A great competitor on the ice, Jackson's off-ice capers had him constantly in hot water with Leaf management, and until this year the stigma that resulted followed him beyond the grave.

Con Smythe, crusty owner, general-manager and coach of the Leafs during Jackson's career and a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame selection committee, vowed that Jackson would never get into the Hall so long as he sat on the committee.

But the committee decided this year that Jackson's inevitable elevation had waited too long and overrode Smythe's objections. Smythe followed the decision with his resignation from the committee.

"The Kid Line is being reunited tonight," noted Milt Dunnell, former Toronto Star sports editor, in his eulogy of "one of the classiest left wingers of all time."

Reports on The Outdoors

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Recent reports indicate that salmon "farming" could be the up-and-coming thing in the Pacific Northwest . . . National Marine Fisheries Service experiments in the state of Washington show that commercially-raised salmon fry may soon give supermarket chicket a run for its money . . . fry would be fed a high octane diet for about a year until they reach pan-size . . . present plans call for 600,000 of the fish to be marketed across the United States and Europe next February and if the idea catches the fancy of consumers, the program will be expanded to produce more than two million pounds of salmon per year.

Research has shown that salmon produce one pound of flesh for every one and one-half pounds of feed during the first year of growth . . . this conversion factor from feed to food is twice as efficient as that for raising chickens . . . for this reason salmon prices could very well undercut the poultry market . . . scientists estimate there are about 10,000 acres suitable for salmon "farming" in Puget Sound alone and each acre is capable of producing 500,000 salmon per year . . . now isn't that a rosy picture?

★ ★ ★

Waterfowl hunters from the West Coast through to Manitoba can expect a fall flight exceeding or at par with that of 1970 . . . Ducks Unlimited (Canada) reports bear out our own observations on a recent trip to Kenora, Ontario . . . most prairie sloughs and ponds are filled with water and contain large flocks of ducks . . . even the late nesters, which are sometimes caught short of water, are doing well . . . in B.C., the season is progressing favorably but two or three weeks late . . . but all signs point to a successful production year which should be reflected in the carry-over into next year.

★ ★ ★

Bowhunters on Vancouver Island will have three weeks of buck deer hunting this year, free of the commotion created by rifle shooters . . . the archery season starts Saturday and runs through to Sept. 10 with another week scheduled after the rifle season, from Dec. 6-12 . . . rifle-toters take to the woods on Sept. 11 and the only competition for bow-and-arrow enthusiasts will be the first week of grouse season starting Sept. 4 . . . B.C. Archery Association will hold its annual bowhunting competition in the Nimpkish Valley from Saturday until Sept. 5 with assorted prizes as well as trophies for the largest buck, smallest buck and the most grouse . . . competitors are reminded that black bear season does not open until Sept. 11 . . . so this year there will not be a trophy for the largest bruin . . . entry fee is $2 . . . weigh-in station this will be at Schoen Lake.

★ ★ ★

Something to think about during the coming hunting season . . . commencing April 1, 1972 the hunter training, conservation and outdoor safety program sponsored by the fish and wildlife branch becomes mandatory for all violators of the Wildlife and Firearms Act . . . all resident hunters between the ages of 14 and 18 inclusive whether or not they have had a hunting licence . . . and all first-time hunters 14 years of age or older . . . Paul Presidente, in charge of training instructors for the program throughout B.C., reports that a total of 631 instructors and 2,483 students are qualified under the provincial program.

Some big tyee-sized salmon appear to be coming in from the vicinity of Campbell River, like the 58-pounder landed earlier this week by David Cashen of West Vancouver in Quathiaski Cove . . . Cashen landed the lunker after a half-hour struggle using the lightest Tyee Club regulation tackle 20-pound test line — and a whole herring.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

ORR SIGNS $1 MILLION PACT . . . . . SALARY SITUATION STILL CONFUSING

Pro Athletes Caught in Wage Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Professional athletes in the United States were told Thursday they are not exempt from President Nixon's 90-day freeze on wages and prices, but there is still much confusion.

The Cost of Living Council ruled that professional athletes who had not entered into new contracts prior to the Aug. 15 freeze cannot negotiate contracts during the 90-day period calling for salary increases to cover their services during the freeze.

The council, Nixon's policy-making board, apparently gave the answer to many questions but failed to reply to others, such as the rulings' application to bonuses and incentives and to long-term contracts.

Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said the council's decision was expected but "the question remains, will the wage freeze be lifted after 90 days or will it be continued?"

All NHL players must sign contracts before attending training camps which open during the second week of September.

Campbell said players of U.S.-based teams will negotiate raises, to become effective when the freeze is lifted.

"We decided our teams should proceed as usual with negotiations for new contracts against the possibility of the wage freeze being lifted after 90 days."

"But it is my personal assessment that the wage freeze will be continued beyond 90 days," he said, adding that players on Canadian teams will be allowed immediate raises.

Campbell, in Toronto for inductions to Hockey's Hall of Fame, also said U.S. arenas which had announced increases in ticket prices will be allowed to charge the inflated rate.

Pete Retzlaff, general manager of Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, said:

"We haven't yet seen any official statements on the freeze as it applies to professional football, but we assume that we can continue to negotiate with players who are unsigned, and that each contract we arrive at will contain a paragraph referring to the executive order and acknowledge that the contract will not become effective until such time as the wage and price controls are removed."

But, he said:

"We don't know whether incentives and bonuses would be considered valid or invalid. For these and other things we'll just have to wait and find out."

It also is still unclear whether the contract signed Thursday by Bobby Orr, the NHL's all-star defenceman, is valid.

Orr signed a five-year contract with Boston Bruins for what was believed to be $1 million, which would make Orr the highest-paid player in NHL history.

Weston Adams Jr., Bruins' president, said the contract was completed and executed last February, after more than a year of negotiations. He said no announcement of the agreement was made at the time because of several minor points that had not been resolved.

—AP Wirephoto.

IT MAY HAVE BEEN WHISPERING from attorney Alan Eagleson (right) that produced big smile on face of hockey superstar Bobby Orr. It is also possible that happiness came from fact that Orr had just signed multi-year contract with Boston Bruins. Reports indicate that pact signed Thursday will give Orr one million dollars over five-year period.

Good Event, Says Arnie After Ousting Mike Hill

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — "I've come to the conclusion that it's a good tournament," Arnold Palmer said Thursday after scoring a 68-71 victory over Mike Hill in the $200,000 United States professional match play golf championship.

"It's going to take time to develop, of course. . . . But it's interesting. . . . Almost anything can happen out there."

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the field, birdied the final hole to eliminate Masters champion Charles Coody 68-69 at the 6,973-yard, par-72 Country Club of North Carolina course.

BOROS ADVANCES

In other play, Julius Boros eliminated Terry Dill 73-76, Art Wall turned back rookie Hubert Green 71-73, while Gene Littler and Gardner Dickinson won in sudden-death playoffs, each with a birdie on the first extra hole. Littler had tied Dave Hill 71-71 while Dickinson and Larry Hinson tied 73-73.

Ray Floyd, a 67-69 upset winner over Jack Nicklaus in the first round, slipped to a 73 but still advanced over Bob Smith, who had a 74. Dave Eichelberger eliminated Lionel Hebert 72-76.

TOTAL STROKES

Palmer, gunning for his fifth victory of the season, had a five-stroke lead with two holes to play and appeared to be headed to a routine victory until the 32-year-old Hill unleashed an eagle birdie finish.

He holed a 120-yard wedge shot for a two on the 17th hole and put his second shot on the front of the green on the 484-yard par-five finishing hole.

Palmer was short in two and pitched up to about 15 feet.

Hill, the younger brother of fiery Dave Hill, left his 40-foot eagle putt about two feet short. Palmer took it out of doubt when he dropped his putt for a birdie.

In the five-day head-to-head competition, scoring is based on total strokes over 18 holes.

Ohio Squad Eliminates Optimists From Series

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Solid pitching helped a team from Mount Healthy, Ohio, eliminate Saanich Evening Optimists Thursday from the 15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball world series.

Mt. Healthy defeated the Optimists, 7-3, for the Canadians' second loss in the nine-team, double-loss elimination tournament. The first loss was an 8-0 thrashing from Puerto Rico on Wednesday.

Mt. Healthy pitcher Jody Feldkamp held Victoria to three hits while his teammates romped to score six runs the first three innings. Mr. Healthy infielder Jim Comarata knocked in four runs with a bases-loaded double and single. Feldkamp and Gary Radziwon each tagged triples.

Victoria's only replay came as Optimists erupted for three runs in the fourth inning, when Ron James, Lyle Scroggs and Bob Wilson each tagged singles and Feldkamp issued his only bases on balls.

Puerto Rico edged Lompoc, Calif., 5-4 in an extra inning Thursday.

Evening Optimists are scheduled to arrive at Victoria International Airport at 9:20 p.m. Sunday.

Baker Sparks Attack As Macs Trample Foes

SASKATOON — Norm Baker's seven-point performance led Victoria McDonald's Bread to a 27-3 victory over Assiniboia, Sask., here Thursday in opening-day play of the Western Canada junior "B" lacrosse championships.

Baker scored three goals and added four assists while Tom Levasseur and Jerry Kustaski each had four goals and two assists. Rick Baker and Mike Walsh both fired hat tricks, while Jim Lynch and Dave Thomson both scored twice.

Adding singles were Bob Turkington, Glen Neuman, Andy Reid, Rob Alexander, Darryl Hooker and George Sprinkling.

GOALIES IN ACT

Even the Victoria goaltending duo of John Hamilton and Bernie Leavitt got in with the point-getters. Hamilton assisted on three goals before Leavitt took over in the nets and helped out on two more scoring plays. The two made 33 saves in the game.

The four-team, round-robin tournament is scheduled to continue tonight with Victoria meeting Edmonton. The Macs play Winnipeg Saturday.

Winner of the Western Canada championship will travel to Cornwall, Ontario, for the best-of-three national final, which starts Monday.

Prince George Golfer Tied For Canadian Junior Lead

EDMONTON (CP) — There was a three-way fight to retain first place today in the third round of the Canadian junior golf championships.

Tied with one-under-par 141s after the second round, Thursday were Adam Brown of Hamilton, Mike Defalco of Lucerne, Que., and Rob Laing of Prince George, B.C.

Only one stroke behind was 18-year-old Scott Keenlyside of Langley, B.C. with even-par rounds of 71.

The first-round co-leader, Mike McLaren, 16, of Woodbridge, Ont., fell into a third-place tie with Bruce Heuchan, 17, of Aylmer East, Que. McLaren, who carded a first-round 69, brought in a 75 Thursday, while Heuchan had 71 and 73 for 144.

Defalco, 18, didn't make the Quebec junior team this year because he broke his hand playing hockey and was out of golf for a month. This didn't show, however, as he brought home a par-35 on the first nine and a one-under 35 on the longer leg for a 71-70—141 total.

LED ONTARIO TEAM

Brown, 18, has been playing well all week. He led Ontario to the interprovincial team matches Tuesday with a sparkling 69. He also has rounds of 71-70.

Seventeen-year-old Laing, who plans to enter a physical education and recreation course at the University of British Columbia this fall, said his putter gave him his 70 Thursday.

"My putter was working well," he said. "I sank a couple of 10-footers. Also, the greens weren't as spiked up as yesterday."

FIVE VICTORIANS

There were 175 golfers entered in the 72-hole tournament but the field was cut to those with 153 or less, slightly more than 60 today, for the final two rounds.

Five Victoria golfers and a former Victorian survived the cut. Gordie Rands of Cedar Hill carded his second 74 Thursday to lead the 11-man Vancouver Island contingent. Bob Beauchemin of Gorge Vale scored a 149 as did former Victorian Dave Donaldson of Vancouver. Beauchemin fired a 74 Thursday and Donaldson scored a 76.

Gary Ferguson of Gorge shot a 150 on rounds of 76 and 74, while Keith Burrell of Uplands checked in at 152 with a 77 and 75. Don Marsden of Gorge qualified for further play with a 78-75 for 153.

O'MALLEY MISSES

Among those affected by the cut were Cedar Hill's Wayne O'Malley who opened with an 81, and fired a 73 Friday to card a 154. Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale also had a 154 score with a 79 in the second round.

Other Victorians eliminated were Raye Horne (80-75—155); Doug Mahovlic (78-81—159); Jeff Jones (82-78—160) and Raye Seymour (83-77—160). All are from Gorge Vale.

CRICKET TOUR DELAYED FOR YEAR

LONDON (Reuter) — The governing body of cricket in England, the Marylebone Cricket Club, has called off England's scheduled tour this year of India, Pakistan and Ceylon.

The tour has been re-arranged for 1972-73.

MCC's decision followed its earlier request to the cricket boards of the countries concerned for a postponement because of the political situation.

MCC said then that a postponement would be in the best interest of cricket.

'Irrelevant' Education System Frustrates Young in B.C.

By PAUL JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Alberta and British Columbia young people are becoming increasing frustrated with what they feel is a restrictive and irrelevent educational system.

This, more than anything, appears to be the chief complaint of the youth of the two far western provinces as contained in It's Your Turn, the report by the committee on youth to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier released Thursday.

Other areas of concern by the young include the drug scene and the role of the police in enforcing stiff laws on soft drug users. Seemingly ignored to a great extent are the "criminal" pushers of hard drugs and a lack of real democracy in Canadian governments.

SIMILAR VIEWS

In a province by province survey, Alberta and B.C. come through with similar views on a number of subjects, although British Columbia youth tends to be more firm in its demands.

Alberta high school students, says the report, are restless and frustrated by their lack of power in determining what they will study. They express great interest in the ideas of free schools with open curricula.

Students believe the classroom should develop fundamental learning and thinking processes used throughout life rather than be geared to learning hugh volumes of facts soon to be forgotten. They also complain about "incompetent" teaching staff who have little rapport or interest in the students.

IGNORES PEOPLE

B.C. students feel that the education system remains basically geared to training individuals for a job. It ignores suggestions that it be directed towards training people to respond to their environment and to make socio-economic and political decisions.

"In high schools there is a direct correlation between degree of discontent and school size. Students in large secondary schools complain of the factory atmosphere. The most overwhelming satisfaction came from students attending open-progression, pupil-involved schools such as Carson Graham secondary school in Vancouver and small independent schools," says the report.

The youth of B.C. is particularly concerned about financial restrictions which prevent Canadian youth from enjoying full educational opportunities. They feel that university education still remains the preserve of the middle and upper classes. Many young people feel the government should at least investigate the feasibility of establishing free universities.

The Canada student loans plan comes under heavy criticism in the report. Many students find it impossible to make up the difference between a $1,000 loan and the $2,600 sum needed for an academic year. They feel the federal government should provide loans to students who have to earn the cost of living away from home to get the education they desire or need.

NATIVE EDUCATION

Both Alberta and British Columbia are concerned about native education. The B.C. report says that the majority of Indian youths drop out after Grade 8. The Alberta viewpoint is that this is an indictment of an education system which does not relate to native people.

"Within the present system, the Indian students' cultural background is denigrated. As a result, they have no motivation to equip themselves for a society which shuns them."

The report says that many Alberta's young people express concern about the new patterns of drug use in the province, particularly among the younger 13 to 15-year age group.

A good number of Alberta students expressed a concern that the RCMP campaign to close down all outlets of marijuana catalyzed an increased use of heroin and other hard drugs.

DRUG LAWS

British Columbia young people are extremely suspicious of the police and legal system. Drug use and the police's singling out of the young for harassment were the major reasons for such attitudes.

They suggested a change in drug laws, especially in regard to soft drugs.

However, the 216-page report continues, young people want facts about hard and soft drugs while, surprisingly perhaps, having mixed feelings on the qestion of legalization. Many were highly concerned about the dangers of the hard drug heroin and its connections with organized crime which controls most of that market.

Young people feel that arrests for drug usage have little effect on the level of drug use. While all sectors of the younger population use soft drugs, members of the hip sub-culture — the most visible and vulnerable drug users — bear the brunt of legal prosecutions.

British Columbia young people are highly concerned about the rise of police power. They see little difference between Canadian and U.S. police, pointing out that there have been increasing incidents of Canadian police appearing in riot squad equipment and displaying open hostility. They say these excesses must be controlled by the municipalities.

Young people in British Columbia are extremely cynical about the political process. Restrictions on the voting age and the lack of avenues of influence other than demonstrations have estranged most youth from traditional political involvement.

The younger person throughout British Columbia wants a voice in the decision-making which governs his or her life — but they are very cynical about the possibilities of satisfaction.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Policemen Demoted

REGINA (CP) — Two city police have been demoted from sergeant to first-class constables as a result of an incident in which Louis Chant, 28, of Regina charged five city constables with assault.

A police department spokesman said Thursday the two were demoted from patrol sergeants "for failing to take the necessary action" in the incident.

Chant alleged one or more of the five assaulted him when he was arrested last July 12. Charges against the five were dismissed this week after a four-day trial.

Judge W. L. Hipperson said there was insufficient evidence to indicate any were guilty of assault but said the story of what happened that night did not come out in testimony and those who could have told the court had not come forward.

Ottawa May Decide Youth Report Is a $500,000 'Mistake'

By IAN PORTER

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-awaited report of the federal committee on youth was poised Thursday between a future as a radical charter for Canadian young people and the political oblivion reserved for $500,000 misunderstandings.

The two years of spadework that went into the report showed up in sections dealing with education and unemployment among youth.

But the decision of the three-man committee to take a stand in favor of legalizing of marijuana attracted the most attention when the report was released.

At a news conference shortly after, committee chairman David Hunter, a 28-year-old Toronto sociologist, frankly admitted the government will be unelikely to accept all of the 29 groups of recommendations contained in the report.

Support for the view was provided almost immediately by several government departments and agencies.

MINISTER CAUTIOUS

In a statement acknowledging receipt of the report, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier thanked the committee for its work and pointedly noted that it had been an independent inquiry.

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald was quick to challenge a recommendation that Canada's military colleges be turned over to civilian control.

The minister also criticized the report's claim that cadet programs are out-dated and its recommendation that the estimated $10 million a year now spent on them be diverted to new social development programs.

Dal Brodhead, executive director of the Company of Young Canadians, took exception to a recommendation that the newly-reorganized agency be disbanded.

From outside government circles, meanwhile, a spokesman for the Canadian Medical Association ridiculed the recommendation on marijuana and hashish as "tantamount to legalizing ignorance."

At the centre was the 218-page report, entitled "It's Your Turn," available to the public through Information Canada at $2.50 a copy.

CANVASSED 10,000

The book was described by its authors Mr. Hunter, Toronto lawyer Vincent Kelly, 33, and Montreal sociologist Pierre Bourdon, 28—as the product of a massive collaboration with 10,000 of the more than four million Canadians between 15 and 24 whose ideas and interests were canvassed and assessed in the project.

Also incorporated were detailed population studies indicating that the higher-than-average unemployment rate endemic among youth for the last 20 years may be pointing to a social crisis.

The prospects for employment for males in the 15-24 age group are seen as particularly grim. Under-educated, unskilled, inexperienced or all three, the male youths will face increasing competition for jobs from older, experienced workers, the growing number of women in the work force and the generation just behind them.

To deal with what it portrays as a bleak, possibly insoluble, problem the report recommends creation of a youth employment directorate.

Among other things, the directorate would ensure that existing and future government programs take into account and investigate the special unemployment problems of youth and would initiate its own programs to provide jobs.

CONFIDENCE BREACHED

In a more general view, the report finds "an open breach of confidence between adults and youth."

Canadian young people, it says, "show every indication of joining the great refusal taking place throughout the world."

"Their confidence in the existing order is being undermined on two fronts: Not only are they forced intellectually to challenge many of the values inherent in our society, but also the traditional motives or incentives for participation in the system are increasingly unavailable."

Canadian youth, the report confidently asserts, are readily entering the counter-culture labelled in the U.S. by author Charles Reich as Consciousness Three.

In response, the report proposes to the government a program arbitrarily entitled P2.

P2 appears as a tentative blueprint for the much-discussed, often-vague concept of participatory democracy.

Granting that the eventual goals may be Utopian, the report proposes that existing programs for summer student employment and travel, including the Opportunities for Youth program, the CYC and other initiatives be included in P2.

Envisioned is a panel of five regional agencies and one national agency to provide services and support to social development projects conceived in local community assemblies.

A key characteristic of the local assemblies is that they would bring together younger and older citizens to make decisions affecting their lives—a distinct alternative to the technocratic structure of modern society, the report maintains.

"The report, however, isolates the drug issue as a central cause of dispute between young people and their elders. Tackling the issue head on, it at least does not fudge in its conclusions.

"Drug laws as they stand are ineffective," it states.

"Logically, it is difficult to understand how a society, unsuccessful at suppressing the use of drugs such as tobacco, alcohol and chemicals by its members, can hope to erase the use of soft drugs now so popular with, and available to, such a large number of its population."

Medical studies on the effects of marijuana are far from conclusive, the report claims, adding that "the most reliable studies show it is not physically addictive."

Kelly, Hunter and Bourdon explain their report

'FEARS REALIZED'

OTTAWA (CP) — "Our worst fears have been realized," Vincent Kelly of Toronto told a news conference Thursday as he waved a copy of an Ottawa newspaper which headlined a story that the report of the committee on youth had called for the legalization of marijuana.

The three committee members, commissioned by Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier to study the attitudes and opinions of youth, made 29 sets of recommendations in their 218-page report.

Kelly said the committee feared that too much would be made of the marijuana recommendation. The Ottawa report indicated that fear was well founded.

Military Colleges Defended

OTTAWA (CP) — A recommendation that Canada's military colleges be turned over to civilian control was challenged Thursday by Defence Minister Donald Macdonald.

He said the proposal, contained in a government-commissioned report on youth released Thursday, was based on a faulty interpretation of the colleges' role.

The report said Canadian colleges — Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., College Militaire Royal, St. Jean, Que., and Royal Roads, Victoria—have traditionally been "the preserve of the military establishments."

★ ★ ★

Canada's military college curriculum was more civilian oriented with military personnel making up only 30 per cent of the teaching staffs.

The youth committee report calls attention to low-enrolment figures, high drop-out rates and high costs at the military schools as further reasond for their disbandment.

The defence minister agreed with the report's recommendation that more officer candidates come from the ranks and from recruitment of degree-holding civilians but said these two sources would not produce enough officers to meet the forces' needs.

MUNRO APPEALS TO PUBLIC

Drug Price Report in Mail

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro has carried his campaign for lower drug prices directly to the consumer by including a price-comparison pamphlet with every family allowance, old age pension and youth allowance cheque.

"I advise you to shop carefully for non-prescription drugs," says a letter signed by Mr. Munro on the four-page bilingual pamphlet.

It reports a January, 1971, price survey of 10 drug stores in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver showing "wide variation in the price paid by consumers."

The first batch of pamphlets went into family allowance cheques mailed Monday. The total mailing is expected to reach millions of cheque recipients.

In June there were 3,037,959 families receiving family allowance cheques, 1,731,746 persons receiving old age pension cheques, 471,559 families receiving youth allowances cheques and 12,517 families receiving family assistance payment cheques.

The pamphlet will go into the September youth allowance cheques.

SURVEY UPDATED OFTEN

P. S. Woodstock, executive assistant to the federal deputy health minister, said three or four such surveys are planned yearly. The next pamphlet mailing will be November.

The drugs surveyed in the current mailing were the largest-selling, non-prescription items, including insulin for diabetics, a heart drug, an anti-histamine, a headache tablet, vitamin and iron preparations, and a cough syrup.

Quinidine sulfate, the heart drug, had price ranges of $7.25 to $8.93 per 100 .2-gram tablets at Halifax, $5.12 to $8.95 at Montreal, $5.99 to $8.93 Toronto, $6.75 to $8.93 Winnipeg and $6.57 to $7.65 Vancouver.

An anti-ulcer drug, Pro-Banthine, for 100 15-milligram tablets, ranged in price from $7 to $8.50 in Halifax, $6.40 to $7.70 Montreal, $6.15 to $7.85 Toronto, $6.25 to 6.30 Winnipeg and $5.39 to, $7.70 Vancouver.

No Clue To Soup Poison

CAMDEN, N.J. (Reuter) — Government officials and the Campbell Soup Co. still have no clues to solve the mystery of how deadly botulin poison got into a can of their chicken vegetable soup.

"It is simply impossible, it cannot happen," said Campbell President W. D. Murphy in an interview. "But it happened. Now we are going to make the impossible even more impossible."

Government inspectors and Campbell officials have gone over every step of the soup-making process at Campbell's Paris, Tex., plant in an attempt to find out how the poison — among the deadliest known to man — got into a can of soup manufactured there July 15.

There have been no reported illnesses and Campbell says it already has accounted in its recall for 74 per cent of the cans in that batch of chicken vegetable soup and more are coming.

CAUSED BY BACTERIA

But recalling the soup was only the beginning. The more serious step of finding out how the toxin got into the can in the first place faces Campbell and the government. So far, they are stymied.

The poison is caused by a common bacteria called clostridium botulinum, generally found in the soil. It is, almost always, completely harmless.

The contaminated chicken vegetable soup was spotted when a salesman spotted a swollen can. Laboratory analysis showed botulin toxin.

U.S. Duty Impact Harder in Time

TORONTO (CP) — The longer the new additional U.S. duties remain on imports from Canada, the greater will be the damage to all parts of the Canadian economy, Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Thursday night.

"It is probable that the initial impact of the surcharge on the Canadian economy as a whole will not be too severe," he told the Law Society of Upper Canada, "although certain sectors of the economy will face serious problems immediately.

"But the longer the surcharge continues to apply to Canadian exports, the greater will be the adverse impact throughout the whole Canadian economy."

He said there were important signs of good recovery in the Canadian economy at mid-year, including growing retail sales, employment and capital expenditures, but the Nixon announcements cast a cloud on the outlook.

On the subject of tax reform, he said the present system of federal sales taxes is likely to remain basically the same for several years.

He did not propose to make any further basic revisions of the tax law after Parliament deals with his new bill on personal and corporation income taxes this fall.

Moreover, when the federal government take up the subject of sales and other commodity taxes "it will likely be the responsibility of a different minister of finance."

He did not elaborate.

He is believed never to have mentioned in public the possibility of leaving the finance portfolio. Rather, the remark seemed to emphasize that he is not planning further basic tax law revision for some years. He said many people seemed to think that the income tax law revision was only the first step.

"I can assure you that nothing is further from the truth," he said. "We are not about to drop the other shoe. Both shoes are already on the floor."

A committee of the law society recently criticized the new income tax bill as too complex, and containing too many anomalies.

Benson said that when Parliament resumes Sept. 7 to take up the tax bill, he will announce some proposed changes which result from consultations he has had with lawyers, accountants, and others since he introduced the bill June 18.

It was necessarily complex, but he believed that sufficient study would make the bill more easily understood than the present Income Tax Act.

The government is examining the subject of taxing charitiable donations, to determine whether the present definition of a charitable organization is broad enough. A committee of government experts will also examine how pension plans should be registered and de-registered.

He also said the present system of allowing depreciation write-offs as a business expense for tax purposes, in effect for 20 years, should be reviewed.

Hardest Hit Exports Listed

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin has sent provincial cabinet ministers a listing of Canadian exports likely to be hit hard by new United States import duties.

The announcement was made and the lists released to reporters Thursday while a delegation of Canadian officials met their American counterparts in Washington to back up Canada's request for a general exemption from the added duities of up to 10 percentage points on a wide range of goods, ordered Aug. 15 by President Nixon.

Pepin sent the list to provincial ministers who are principally concerned with export markets for their provinces' products.

Pepin's listing showed that of approximately $10.5 billion of U.S. imports from Canada last year, $2.8 billion would be affected.

Products affected include:

● Nearly 85 per cent of Canada's wood products exports, of $461.3 million of total U.S. wood and wood products imports from Canada.

● Almost 45 per cent of Canada's sales of metals, alloys and basic shapes and forms, totalling $432.1 million last year out of total U.S. imports from Canada of $925 million.

● $332.2 million worth of machinery and mechanical equipment, more than one quarter of United States total imports from Canada in that field.

● Beverages, principally whisky, all of which would be affected by the surcharge, some petroleum and natural gas products, electrical machinery and equipment, and transportation equipment.

No definite result of the Washington conference Thursday was expected to be announced immediately.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson has announced a meeting Sept. 1 of national farm organizations, national commodity groups and food processing councils to discuss the new duties.

QUEBECERS ASK STAND

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — Paul O. Trepanier, vice-president of the Quebec wing of the federal Progressive Conservative Party, said Thursday that all federal political parties should take a stand on self determination for Quebec.

He said there would be no need for a Quebec bloc in Ottawa if all federal parties recognized the right of Quebec to decide its own future.

A group of 15 well-known Quebecers met secretly in Montreal recently to discuss the possibility of a Quebec party working on the federal level.

Mr. Trepanier said in an interview that the idea of such a bloc has occurred before and seems attractive at first glance but is in fact full of danger for Quebecers.

He said that Quebecers are needed in all federal parties so that a purely English-speaking government does not make a decision on Quebec's right to self-determination.

Mr. Trepanier said he still believes that Confederation can work if French Canadians strengthen their participation in all political parties.

He said there was a possibility, however, that Quebec could separate within five or 10 years.

Huge Loan To Official Unsecured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Attorney-General Will R. Wilson has acknowledged he received $230,000 in unsecured loans from the bank of Frank W. Sharp, central figure in a Texas stock-fraud case.

Wilson said Thursday the latest $30,000 loan from the Sharptown Bank was in August, 1970, 18 months after he joined the justice department, and after the Securities and Exchange Commission began an investigation of Sharp's activities.

Wilson said he repaid the loan in March of this year, two months after Sharp and a number of Texas officials were named in what the SEC termed the "systematic looting" of banks and insurance companies through stock manipulations.

Wilson, head of the justice department's criminal division, released a statement describing the loans and how his net worth nearly tripled to $1.3 million between 1965 and 1968. Wilson was Sharp's lawyer during 1967 to 1969, when Sharp built a financial empire through his bank real estate-insurance conglomerate.

Retaliation Opposed Over 10 Per Cent Duty

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Manufacturers' Association urged Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday not to take retaliatory action against the United States because of its 10-per-cent supplementary duty on manufactured goods entering that country.

In a letter to the prime minister, signed by CMA president Gerard Filion, the group said:

"In the light of the United States' serious balance-of-payments deficit, nothing can be gained by retaliatory measures on the part of Canada or other trading partners of the United States.

"Such measures would likely lead to an international chain-reaction which would in turn further curtail the volume of world trade and industrial production."

The letter said the effects of the U.S. move should be considered in combination with the implications of the changing international value of the U.S. dollar, the results of U.S. tax reductions and investment tax and other things.

"A suitable responsibble Canadian policy must be designed to offset these effects."

Flood Talks Set

WINNIPEG (CP) — A four-government meeting to discuss spring flooding of the Pembina River in Manitoba and North Dakota has been scheduled for Oct. 6 in Winnipeg.

The meeting was proposed by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp to discuss recommendations of a 1967 International Joint Commission study of the flooding problem.

Representatives of Manitoba and Canadian federal governments plan a meeting Oct. 5 to prepare for the meeting with North Dakota and United States government delegations.

Problem Bared

CALGARY (CP) — Alcohol is causing chronic problems for 95 of the 400 families on the Blackfoot Reserve, says a report by Allan Wolf Leg.

Wolf Leg, a Blackfoot, spent four months researching the subject on the reserve 60 miles east of Calgary by interviewing residents, band employees and band councillors.

"The pattern of drinking in these families is usually excessive — determined by the amount of money available, whether government funds or welfare payments."

Luncheon Crashed

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Five steelworkers wearing work clothes and boots crashed a civic luncheon for Premier Ed Schreyer Thursday, dispersed among invited guests and ate out of their metal lunch boxes.

The men said they were angry because they hadn't been invited.

Later, one of the men, union vice-president Nick Evans said the protest was staged because only "the establishment" had been included on the guest list.

The protest was mostly ignored by those attending the luncheon. The invited guests included officials of the International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd. and the union.

Crisis Recognized

VANCOUVER (CP) — Responding to observations by community services organizations that the alcoholism situation in Vancouver has reached "crisis" proportions, city council's health and welfare committee decided Thursday to take immediate action.

Medical Health Officer Dr. Gerry Bonham told the committee that a planned permanent detoxification centre for the city will not be in operation for at least another 18 months.

Dr. Bonham and welfare director Walter Boyd were instructed by the committee to explore the possibility of using hostel beds for alcoholism treatment; to seek space that would accomodate 30 to 50 beds as a treatment centre and to investigate the possibility of provincial government financial assistance.

Man Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police sought a 38-year-old man Thursday after the brutal beating of a two-year-old boy.

Leo Cairns was taken to hospital Thursday with bruises, a black eye and a pelvic injury after his mother, Melva Cairns phoned police.

Mrs. Cairns said the man kicked and beat the boy with a belt, then threw him out of the living room into the hallway.

Hospital authorities said he was in good condition.

Vote Change Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — City Council's general purposes committee Thursday recommended that the vote be taken away from corporations and societies in civic elections.

The recommendation, which now goes to city council, would affect about 700 owner companies and 500 tenant companies in the city.

Under the present system, a corporation owned in New York, by foreigners could conceivably have a number of subsidiary firms registered in the city—all having a voe in civic elections.

A motion that no political affiliations be shown with candidates' names on ballots was defeated by the committee.

U.S. Ship Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American passenger ship has been charged with polluting Vancouver harbor with a discharge of oil.

The crown alleges the Mariposa, under Capt. F. L. Lorence, was seen discharging oil as it entered the harbor for a seven-hour stay Aug. 23. The cause of the discharge was immediately corrected when port authorities informed the captain.

The vessel now is on a short cruise to Alaska. The summons is returnable to provincial court in Vancouver Sept. 1.

1,859 Jobs Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Youth Employment Services this summer surpassed its goal of finding 1,500 summer jobs for young people in the Vancouver area. Director Perry Goldsmith said Thursday the organization had helped get 1,859 jobs since its offices opened June 16. The eight offices are to close Friday.

Upgrading Wanted

VANCOUVER (CP) — City social planner Maurice Egan has been instructed to determine methods of using city welfare lodging demands as a means of forcing slum landlords to upgrade skid road rooms.

City council's health and welfare committee decided Thursday that the current state of disrepair of most of the rooms in the downtown East Side area cannot be tolerated any longer.

Egan has been advised to work in consultation with welfare director Walter Boyd, health inspectors, building inspectors and planners in formulating a policy to improve the situation.

Boyd told the meeting the welfare department pays for about 350 rooms each night, at an average charge of $10 to $12 per week.

FATAL ACE

On the High Cost Of Being Perfect

My long-time golfing rival, Mr. Jack "The Knife" Webster, came within four blades of grass of scoring a hole-in-one earlier this week over the water at the fourth of Royal Colwood and expressed his mortification with his customary restraint.

He flung himself prone upon the tee, beating the turf with his pudgy fists and bellowing at the fickle fates that had deprived him of every golfer's wildest dream. His disappointment was, as they say, manifest.

As some solace to the poor boob I spent the rest of the rounds telling him of my friend Wiggin Morgan, as I'll call him, who aced the second at Oak Bay in my presence and was never quite the same ever again.

It is a story that should be known to all golfers and, indeed, may have some philosophical connotations for every man who aspires to any ultimate experience.

Wiggin, a high handicapper like myself, responded to the miracle with great joy, bought the usual rounds of drinks and seemed none the worse for his experience. I would not have dreamed that it could have had such a traumatic effect on his life and his character as, we shall see, it sure enough did.

Most golfers might be expected to be somewhat tiresome in recounting such a triumph and easily forgiven for it, considering that the odds against it are in excess of a million to one. Wiggin was not exactly tiresome. He was unbearable.

He had evolved the notion, you see, that it was not luck so much as skill. "I knew it would go in," he would say to anyone in the locker room who had not managed to drift out of conversational orbit. "For some strange reason everything I did in that one single shot was so perfect that I did not even have to look up to know that it was going in the hole. It was a strange experience, almost as if I were being given divine guidance . . ." And so he'd go on, unmindful of the fixed smiles and rolling eyes of his listeners.

A week or two of this was enough to isolate him from even the most tolerant club members. He then took to describing the event, in every minute detail, at social gatherings and business meetings. Within a very short time he became known as a man to avoid.

★ ★ ★

It was about this time that Wiggin's wife left him and, worse, as every true golfer will recognize, his game began to go to pieces. Having experienced that one magnificent moment of pure perfection he could abide nothing less. Even his regular foursome finally wearied of his constant muttering and cursing and found excuses to join other groups.

It was no good trying to joke with him. Wiggin's closest friend reported that he had tried this when Wiggin had put on an almost comical performance of ineptness, turning the first nine in 69 strokes, and missing the ball entirely on the 18th tee.

"Is this the fellow who once scored a hole in one?" Wiggin's companion jested, whereupon Wiggin lashed at him viciously with his Arnold Palmer driver. Fortunately his swing had gone to pieces so thoroughly that he missed his victim by several inches. With that, he turned and strode from the course, never to be seen again.

The story might have ended there, I told Webster, had I not chanced to meet Wiggin some two years later near the liquor store on Government Street when, not recognizing me, he shambled toward me and asked for a handout.

I was shocked at the man's appearance. He exuded the stale aroma of cheap wine. His eyes were glazed, lifeless. His clothes were in rags. I noted that he wore on his head a peaked golf cap, dirty and torn, on which words, "Victoria Golf Club" could barely be discerned. His whole body shook with the ravages of drink and poverty.

★ ★ ★

He could tell me little of the tragic events that had cast him upon life's ash heap, but mumbled away about "the selfishness of the human race" and the disloyalty of his friends. "Jealousy, that was it," he babbled at one point, "they were all jealous."

"You mean it all goes back to that lucky day when you scored your hole-in-one?", I asked.

Wiggin looked at me sharply. His eyes seem to clear miraculously and burned with a shining intensity.

"You remember that day, eh, Jack?" he said. "I knew it would go in! For some strange reason everything I did in that one single shot was . . ."

Well, as I say, Wiggin Morgan is not his real name and I have dramatized the story ever so slightly, but it is all substantially true and, even if it weren't, the moral would be clear: Never try for absolute perfection for after that life is a drag.

Victorians Jump Age Gap in Pot Poll

★ ★ ★

Views Show Concern Widespread

Victorians are divided and not along age lines about whether marijuana should be legalized in Canada, a Times public opinion poll showed today.

The on-the-street interviews were conducted following Thursday's report by a federal committee on youth which recommended that marijuana smoking be legalized in Canada.

The report, commissioned by the federal government, said: "Logically, it is difficult to understand how a society, unsuccessful at suppressing the use of drugs such as tobacco, alcohol and chemicals by its members, can hope to erase the use of soft drugs."

●

Mrs. Frank Hewat of 1120 Blanshard had no trouble deciding where she stood:

"It's idiotic," she said, adding that people are better off without the weed.

Her husband said no one knows enough about the drug's long-term effects and there is no guarantee that setting the smoking age at 18 will keep younger people from using pot.

Don Robinson of Esquimalt wouldn't give his address but said he had no doubt the government should legalize the drug. Canada should legalize heroin and prostitution as well, he said.

". . . legalize"

This would keep the Mafia out of the world of drugs and sex, he said.

Richard Klotz of New York, a psychologist who treats drug addicts, said he was "all for legalizing marijuana." No connection between soft and hard drug use exists, he said, because narcotic addicts get hooked to satisfy emotional and psychological needs.

People use alcohol as an escape — that's legal — and pot is no worse, he said.

●

But Lorna Meichan of 3284 Alder said she read in an Ann Landers column that marijuana is harmful.

"I was reading Ann Landers and they ran a letter (from a pot smoker) and she ran it just the way it was written to them and the words were all mixed up and everything else."

Sid Boyd of 1330 Denman said marijuana is harmful to people with emotional problems. It can destroy families.

"I know. I've seen lots of cases. I've been around and I know what it can do. If drugs aren't harmful, why do so many kids try to commit suicide on them?"

Bill Boggs, a student at Queen's University, doubted whether legalizing pot would change anything. He said marijuana leads to harder drugs, but saw merit in restricting its use to people 18 and over if it were to be made legal.

Neil Bergstrom of 2064 Campbell said he saw no point in people smoking pot. Alcohol may be no more harmful than marijuana, he said, but why compound the problem of drug use by introducing more legal drugs?

MEICHAN

HEWAT

BERGSTROM
". . . no point"

BOYD

KLOTZ

Time Not Right For Legalization

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A sampling of views from community leaders in Greater Victoria shows they are generally not convinced the time has arrived to make soft drugs legal, as recommended by the federal committee on youth Thursday. (See story Page 15)

But they appear receptive to the idea if research should prove marijuana and hashish not harmful.

The doctors, churchmen and school trustees contacted also did not believe in general that the alienation of youth was as complete as the committee's report suggests.

ONLY TWO

The report, two years in the making at a cost of $500,000, was assembled by David Hunter, 28, a Toronto sociologist, lawyer Vincent Kelly, 33, also of Toronto and Pierre Bourdon, 28, a sociologist in Montreal.

They offer 29 groups of recommendations, with comments on drugs and youth alienation being only two of them.

Local spokesmen were asked how they felt about the committees' recommendation that use of marijuana and hashish should be made legal for all at age 18.

They were also asked how they viewed in general what the committee calls "an open breach of confidence between adults and youth."

Allan McKinnon, chairman of the Greater Victoria school board and teacher:

"The Le Dain Commission report will have a lot more authority than this one and I'm just waiting for that report . . . I think a tremendous amount of research is required before people can decide how right or wrong these drugs are.

"It seems impossible to read two consecutive reports on marijuana that agree with each other."

McKinnon disagrees wholeheartedly with the committee's measure of youthful disenchantment.

"It's hard to give a short answer on this but my own idea is that the gap is narrowing . . . and I've noticed the hostility of four or five years ago is gone. Both sides will talk to each other."

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, Greater Victoria metro health board:

". . . Maybe marijuana and hashish don't harm people but I think they change personalities and if taken continually remove ambition; the urge to create something of one's life.

NOT TIME

"I don't entirely agree with legalization but certainly the penalties for using them might be less severe. I think the pushers should be dealt with . . ."

"I'm not saying no (to legalization) but I don't think this is the time. We've got to know a little bit more about it."

Bishop F. R. Gartrell, Anglican leader of the Vancouver Island diocese:

"I think the very fact of the harmful effects of marijuana and hashish are not disproven is the point. There is so much disagreement among people who ought to know . . . this is obviously no time to be considering legalizing something which is so doubtful."

On youth alienation, he said the problem is not one of age differences but of temperaments.

MANY ASPECTS

Dr. Phillip Ney, child psychiatrist and school trustee:

"There are many aspects . . . and one is that (drugs) are not just an individual problem but one society has to contend with. I don't think there is any good evidence that (marijuana and hashish) do not have a harmful effect on society as a whole . . ."

Ney explains that if soft drugs can be used to give people the pleasure previously found through the learning, working and achieving processes, then the value of these processes is going to be seriously challenged.

Do people want these traditional values changed?

"All I'm saying is that society is going to have to ask itself this. I think before marijuana and hasish are legalized there should be a plebiscite."

Msgr. Michael O'Connell of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral:

"I would go along with legalization if the really qualified people are convinced it should be legalized, if there's a common consensus after the medical people have studied all aspects.

"I wouldn't say it was a moral issue."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, asked about the youth committee report this morning, said: "That committee is part of the problem, not part of the solution."

Pollen's Planning Scheme Turned Back by Council

Planning Chairman Harold Olafson Thursday beat back an attack on his committee by Ald. Peter Pollen.

The attack, in the form of a Pollen scheme for a full-scale review of city planning objectives, was accompanied by Pollen's charge that planning in Victoria is "chaotic."

Council voted 4-2 to send the scheme of Olson's planning committee for study before it is again presented to council as a whole.

Olafson denied the charge of chaos and said Pollen had "plenty of opportunity" to solve planning problems when he was planning chairman.

Pollen had won agreement August 19 in his health and welfare committee to hold committee of the whole meetings and discuss a wide variety of planning objectives.

IN AGREEMENT

Olafson said Thursday he did not disagree with the idea but insisted the scheme be sent first to planning committee.

Pollen denounced the move as "just incredible" and predicted the idea would be "rerouted to obscurity."

Speaking from prepared notes, Olafson asked "how would he (Pollen) feel if I brought up a health and welfare matter in B Committee?"

As for the city's planning, "I don't feel it's chaotic." Recalling that Pollen had been planning chairman all last year, Olafson said "he had plenty of opportunity to correct (city plans) at that time."

Olafson insisted the planning committee had achieved a number of things this year, including designation of the Inner Harbor as a special development area, a review of the zoning bylaws, completion of an economic survey, purchase of the Ocean Cement property, adoption of the Rockland report and the building of a waterfront park on Belleville Street.

Olafson said any member of council can attend any committee meeting so Pollen should have brought his ideas to B Committee which includes planning.

"I am not saying I am against this; I am for it, but I feel it should have been put before B Committee."

TIME WASTE

Ald. Clyde Savage who is acting mayor in Mayor Courtney Haddock's absence, first said "it would be wasting time to go back to B Committee.

But he later voted with Ald. Percy Frampton, Hugh Ramsay and Olafson to send the idea back to committee. Ald. Tom Christie voted with Pollen.

Olafson made no mention of what the committee would do before again going before full council, but Frampton suggested the committee could decide priorities.

Pollen said "I don't think it's appropriate at all to have this buried in B Committee."

"I can see why planning is chaotic if this manipulation and manoeuvring has been going on through 20 years."

Uvic Grad Gets Award

Paul J. Pearlman of Victoria has been named first winner of the Queen Elizabeth British Columbia scholarship which was established earlier this year.

A 1971 honors B.A. graduate of the University of Victoria, Pearlman has been accepted at Cambridge University where he will study law.

Premier Bennett, making the announcement today, said Pearlman "compiled a remarkable record" at the University of Victoria and noted that the calibre of the 29 graduate students applying for the award was "extremely high."

★ ★ ★

Pearlman is also described as an ardent canoeist who has helped develop the interest of others in this sport.

The scholarship, valued at $5,000, is for study at a United Kingdom university. The award was established to honor the centennial year visit of Queen Elizabeth to British Columbia, in May.

The award winner is the son of Victoria lawyer Edwin E. Pearlman, 3275 Uplands.

American Professors Seen as Threat to Nationhood

The high number of American professors in our Universities is a warning that Canada is in danger of losing its nationhood, a leading research scientist and educator said Thursday.

Dr. Jacob Gerhard Rempel, a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and holder of its gold medal for achievement in education and research in Canadian entomology, was speaking to the Entomological Society of Canada conference at the University of Victoria.

Rempel, observing that Canadian and American universities are too "administration oriented," urged a national conference of Canadian universities and colleges to set up a Royal Commission to examine all aspects of university teaching.

"Too much in our curricula is, if not archaic, at least irrelevant to our times," Rempel said. "What was sufficient 10 years ago may be quite inadequate today." The retired professor from the University of Saskatchewan said statistics show that 40 per cent of Canadian university faculty members are foreigners compared to three per cent in Britain and 2.5 per cent in the U.S.

Campus Unrest

But in the humanities an even more lopsided proportion exists, Rempel said.

"Last year in one Canadian institution, in the department of philosophy with a regular staff of 20, 19 were non-Canadian," he said.

"A people in danger of losing its philosophy is in danger of losing its nationhood," Rempel warned.

In attacking university administrations Rempel contended the "administration is the university" attitude — with students playing a secondary role — is one of the major sources of campus unrest and campus unrest is the chief problem with the university institution.

He said that although university is not a school for social reform, professors have a responsibility to society and should speak out on problems of national concern.

Rempel was critical of the power of university administrators in selecting teachers, blaming them for the large number of ultra-conservative and apolitical professors in Canadian institutions.

University administrators have in the past consistantly discouraged any kind of political activity on the campus, Rempel charged.

In contrast with the conservatism of administrations, said Rempel, is the fact that today's "intelligent youth has the courage to protest openly and loudly a philosophy that may yet lead us into technological doom."

He added that many of the demands made by youth are legitimate and timely and enjoy the support of a substantial section of the faculty.

But at the same time he reminded youth that in a university every individual is entitled to respect, dignity and freedom — a factor which some students ignored.

Rempel noted that Canada is experiencing an excessive demand for minerals, water and energy.

Spoiled Society

"This results in wasteful utilization of precious resources, and contributes to the destruction of our environment," he stated. "This excessive demand is first and foremost the result of promotion by a greedy sector of our business community, encouraged by irresponsible government officials, and welcomed by a spoiled and selfish society."

"But at stake is not merely our material wealth," he added. "At stake is our existence as a Canadian nation. In the face of this crisis will the academic raise his voice or will he maintain discreet silence?" Rempel thinks that professors should speak out, but expressed the fear that they would fail in their responsibilities to society because of policies and attitudes of university administrators.

He quoted an American science writer: "If there is a hell it is populated by people who kept silent when they should have spoken out."

Much of what is taught in universities, he said, fostered what Rempel called narrow professionalism.

He advocated a course of information integration, like one offered at the University of Saskatchewan. It involves more than 30 professors from the fields of biology, sociology, economics, chemistry geography, veterinary pathology, law, the Indian-Metis Association, animal and crop science, agricultural economics, the humanities, education and medicine.

Rempel said that foreign languages and mathematics are the two fields of paramount importance today.

Lack of Aid

"In an open curriculum students tend to avoid the courses that call for hard work and discipline — mathematics and foreign languages, he said.

This might eventually eliminate Canadian students from competition at an international level, he said.

The scientists also deplored the lack of government financial support for the humanities and fine arts, noting that at the University of Saskatchewan in 1970 the natural and applied sciences received more than $5 million in grants; the social sciences $45,000 and the humanities $10,000.

"One of the woes of our time is that science is 50 years ahead of philosophy," he said. "The function of the humanities is to give proper perspective on human values.

He warned that if the present trend is allowed to continue, there would be a steady decline in every form of human activity.

A MOTHER can turn her child's head gently to the tasks of concentration and reading and easily put him in good shape to meet the demands of school life. Peter von Ilberg, 5, who isn't an underachiever, will have an extra boost when he starts to school because his mother, Mrs. Renate von Ilberg, has taken time to give him concentration exercises.

A Child Can Avoid Impediments With a Little Help From Mother

● Why is it that some children fail to make progress in school when there appears to be no visible reason why they should not be doing well? This is the second of six articles by Dr. Leslie J. Nason, of the University of Southern California, on the problem of underachievement and what parents can do about it.

By LESLIE J. NASON

Children need self-esteem. They need to have pride in their accomplishments.

Few children enter school with all the skills they need for success in learning to read.

Children vary widely in their shortcomings. Some need to develop better co-ordination. Some need more practice in just talking with adults. Some just haven't learned to listen and let others control their attention.

The last group are the first to come to the attention of the teacher. These children are easy for the teacher to recognize, but difficult to handle.

Children learn to control their attention in specific situations. Here is how one parent helped her daughter learn better control of her attention: She read stories to her, short ones at first and then longer ones. She encouraged her daughter to listen carefully and retell the story when she was finished. They sat close together, with the daughter on the left. As the mother's finger moved across the lines from left to right, she hoped that the daughter would grasp not only the left-to-right idea, but also the fact that the symbols on the page represent the words she was saying.

When the daughter's attention wandered, she was able to turn her head back gently. As the daughter could hold her attention to longer stories and retell them in greater detail, she was getting the bonus of added practice in talking. Her mother's approval of her progress in story retelling gave her a feeling of success. She was learning the kind of behavior which was expected of her in school.

Another activity was carried on during the time the mother was preparing the evening meal. The daughter worked with crayons on large sheets of paper. The game was simple at first. The child learned to hold a crayon so that she could see what she was doing with it. The mother provided several series of dots which the daughter could connect with her crayon.

The game progressed from a line between two dots to a saw-toothed line drawn through several points, to curved lines and on to triangles, squares and circles. The mother was careful to see that the daughter was successful at each step.

It took some practice before moving on to the next figure. As the game grew more complicated, it required more and more concentration on the daughter's part. In the process of the game, there were conversations about colors and squares and circles and up-and-down and left-to-right. Of course the mother allowed free time for drawing whatever the child wished. She was always careful to ask what it was rather than discourage the child by guessing wrong.

So, in the process of developing ability to concentrate, the child was developing skills of talking and eye muscle co-ordination. Only mothers have the time and patience to help a child overcome an early handicap. It doesn't always go rapidly. Things like eye muscle co-ordination sometimes takes weeks and months but progress, however slow, can be noted right from the start.

NO MONEY, MUCH WORK

'Earth People' Dig In

NORTON, Vt. (UPI) — "Earth People's Park," a year-old experiment in alternative life styles, is in danger of running aground on the same fiscal reefs that have sunk mighty corporations and scuttled empires.

The park is out of money and, like any harried middle-class home-owner these days has a mortgage payment due.

Despite the $8,000 payment, due next Wednesday, hand-built houses and log cabins continue to rise on the 582 bug-infested acres in this rugged northeast corner of Vermont.

The idea of Earth People's Park was born in San Francisco when alumni of the Woodstock Festival met to try to keep alive the spirit of their new "nation." The plan was simple. Buy up large tracts of land, "liberate" it and open it free to the people —all the people.

Early last year, buses toured the country collecting nickel and dime contributions at rock festivals, on college campuses and on street corners.

When several thousand dollars was collected, the group, which by then had metamorphosized into Earth People's Park, Inc., made the down payment on the land here.

Handfuls of long-haired transients arriving last summer found a largely hostile community and a rough, tangled tract of land that had been worked over by loggers, who left brush heaped where it was cut, plus roads bulldozed at random.

A number of incidents and a lot of unfavorable publicity drove king-sized wedges between the newcomers and Norton's 200 residents, including many hard-working French-speaking dairy farmers.

It Defies Labels

This year, things have improved somewhat, due in part to the arrival of permanent settlers and to a shared commitment to the land. The obvious hard work of reclaiming the woods, gardening rock-bound on wooden soil, and establishing homesites has won grudging respect from at least some townspeople.

Relations were improved also by the realization by Nortonites that the political "freaks" were more "into" the land than they were "into" taking over the town's governmental structure.

Earth People's Park defies labels.

It is not a commune, although there is a sense of community.

The common tie which binds the people together is the land, commonly owned and run on the concept it belongs to all the people.

A newcomer, who suggested state troopers be barred from the premises without a search warrant, was told gently, "we can't do that, man. It's their land too."

Outsiders Welcome

As a result, visitors from "the outside world," or "straight" society, are welcome. Middle-class couples with small children weary of overcrowded expensive public campground — have come to camp and have endured, if not relished, the lack of sanitary facilities and an adequate water supply.

The concept of people's land is so basic that the deed prohibits the corporate owners from establishing rules or regulations, charging fees, policing the residents, or selling or leasing the land.

The credo, more felt than spoken, is "love the land and don't rip off (steal) from your brothers and sisters."

What has evolved is a sort of basic anarchism; a social-logical experiment in whether a group of strangers can live under the most primitive conditions without rules or governments to guide them, for there is no boss or manager here, nor any governing body.

So far, the experiment seems to be working. There have been no major disagreements, no violence, no major problems and little "ripping off," even though there are no locks at Earth People's Park.

Citizens May Raise Pupil Punishment Issue

Corporal punishment and high school athletics may be among the first topics to be studied by the new citizens' advisory committees to be set up by the Greater Victoria School Board this fall.

The purpose of advisory committees is to inform the board of the educational needs of the community.

The board will supply committees with free meeting rooms, some secretarial services, information, advice and advertising funds up to a maximum of $240.

A constitution for committees was approved at a board meeting earlier this month.

The committees, composed of interesting citizens, will act as "mini" royal commissions and will focus on specific problems.

The board's community information officer, Bill Stavdal, described the committees as "a place where the average citizen can go and be heard with assurance that his words will reach the board's ears."

The constitution specifies that each advisory committee must contain at least one trustee from the school board and membership is restricted to 20 persons.

Membership should provide a cross-section of the public, including students and educators.

Committee members will be chosen by citizens attending formative meetings of the committees. Notice of these meetings will be given after school starts.

The constitution emphasizes that professionals may not make up a majority of any committee

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There is a widow in our neighborhood who always makes a big fuss over the men, but she does not bother to speak to their wives. She cries on the men's shoulders and gets them to do her gardening and household repairs for her. The man across the street keeps her yard looking better than his own.

My husband is one of those she's been crying on lately and it's just eating me up. Last Sunday I looked for my man for two hours and I finally found him in her house laying her linoleum!

I told my husband this woman was hurting my feelings, but he says he is just being neighborly.

Have you any advice for the other wives and me in this neighborhood who are in the same boat? This home wrecker is no spring chicken (she's 55 if she's a day), but she has red hair and never wears a girdle. Thank you. — Jealous

DEAR JEALOUS: The problem is not your neighbor it's your husbands. If they are being more than neighborly, let them know you are jealous and refuse to put up with any nonsense.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister (a twice-married, twice-divorced grandmother of two) has been living with a man for several years, and plans to marry him as soon as his divorce comes through.

Recently this prospective bride asked my husband if he would give her away when she gets married again. And to top it off, she would like him to finance the nuptials.

Abby, at first I thought she was kidding, but my husband assures me she is dead serious, and he asked me to write to you and find out if this is something he is obligated to do since their father is dead.

For years, this nutty sister has used my husband to get her out of the crazy messes she got herself into, and now this ridiculous request.

Does he have to give her away, Abby? I hope you say he doesn't. — Sis.

DEAR SIS: He doesn't.

DEAR ABBY: A gracious hostess must serve refreshments, right? But why must a chairman of a committee meeting serve each guest a rich dessert, loaded with calories?

You have no choice but to accept it, and ooh and aah, and eat it. And then regret having come to the meeting. To make up an excuse about doctor's orders is phoney.

Why can't a hostess serve something such as small assorted cookies? Then her dieting guests can take one without being conspicuous. I just hate to go to meetings because it ruins my diet. Any comment? — Calorie Counter

DEAR COUNTER: The truly gracious hostess considers all her guests. And since so many people are calorie conscious these days, a low calorie alternate should be offered, too. If you have no choice, either decline the dessert, or take a token taste of whatever is served and leave the rest. And don't apologize.

What's your problem? You will feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

The McIvers looked at many homes before buying

Mrs. McIver checks cupboard space

What to Look Out for When Buying a House

The purchase of a home represents the largest single investment most people make in a lifetime.

And that's because the average person spends 25 years paying for a house — often longer than it takes to serve a "life" sentence in a Canadian penitentiary.

But inspite of this, most people who can scrape up a down payment go ahead and buy a home.

A desire for freedom and property brought the pioneers to this country, and their descendants cling to the belief that "every man's home is his castle."

Jack and Bonnie McIver, a young Victoria couple, said they bought a house so they "could barbecue."

After renting here and in Vancouver for seven years, Mr. and Mrs. McIver became "fed up" with the restrictions of apartment living.

"The day the sign went up in the elevator forbidding barbecues, we started looking for a house," McIver said.

McIver works for the municipality of Saanich. His wife is a secretary in a local realty office.

Some city realtors say the debt service ratio, a policy enforced by all mortgage companies, prevents many young couples from buying homes.

According to this policy, only 25 to 27 per cent of a couple's income can be set aside for mortgage and tax payments. Realtors say the individual buyer should decide how much he can afford to pay.

'Dream House' Idea Became Impractical

The debt service ratio is particularly tough on working couples because mortgage companies refuse to allow all the wife's salary to be considered as income. A wife's salary, they say, can't always be depended upon.

Mr. and Mrs. McIver set $23,000 as the maximum amount they would pay for a house and started looking. The average down payment required in Victoria now is 10 to 20 per cent of the total cost of the house.

Mrs. McIver "had a dream house in mind," but she soon found this impractical. She wanted three bedrooms and a full basement, but settled for two bedrooms and no basement.

The McIver's new home, conveniently located in Saanich, has a large back yard.

"We spent a lot of time watching television in the apartment," she said. "We haven't even turned the set on since we moved into the house two weeks ago."

Instead of watching summer re-runs, the McIvers are busy barbecuing, pulling up "hundreds of morning glories," and repairing the fence to contain a new Labrador-Shepherd pup.

"I bought my dog the first week we were in the house," Mrs. McIver said. (No dogs were allowed in their apartment.)

This couple made the down payment with savings and some help from a B.C. Government second mortgage plan for first-time home owners.

The McIvers were able to assume the first mortgage on the property at less than the current interest rate of 9½ per cent.

Payments for the house come to $15 more a month than the McIvers paid for an apartment.

"This way we are putting our money into something we own," McIver said.

Home buyers include all age groups, from the newly married to the newly retired.

"A lot of older people want to exchange a big empty house for a small easily-maintained bungalow when the children leave home," the realtor explained.

He feels people should make sure they like an area — and know it well — before buying.

"Some people buy on the spur of the moment because they like the house and then find they hate the neighborhood," he said.

Another realtor says he uses psychology to assess the needs of his client.

Archie Green like to interview clients in their homes. "It helps me get an idea of their tastes and interests," he explained. "Sometimes people don't really know what they want."

Greene likes to know "how much house a couple can afford" before he takes them hunting. He points out that young people who are buying a home for the first time often have no idea of costs involved.

Greene helps potential buyers work out a simple budget, making sure they can afford to be home-owners and determining how much they can spend in monthly payments.

"Housing involves more than mortgage payments," Greene explained. "It also includes hydro, telephone, heating and maintenance."

Once he knows how much a couple can afford, Greene advises them to buy the best house in that price range — not the least expensive.

The people may have to move when a husband is transferred or promoted," Greene said. "The better the house, the better the chance of a quick resale."

Realtors were quick to point out that a dollar invested in real estete eight years ago has increased in value at a rate of 14 per cent a year. Because of inflation, a dollar banked for a similar length of time is now worth less than when it was deposited — even when interest is taken into account.

Despite the high cost of home-owning, Greene thinks property is the best investment a young couple can make.

Greene prefers to show houses in daylight because the defects show up — and if it rains, so much the better.

Rain Often Reveals Leaking Gutters

"The rain often reveals leaking gutters and damp basements that look great on a sunny day," Greene said.

He had "many years experience in the construction business" before becoming a realtor and tends to warn clients away from older homes.

"The building codes weren't so strict 30 years ago," Greene points out.

Once a couple has decided on a home he suggests they see a lawyer to examine documents and fine print.

He also warns that there are more costs involved than the down payment. Extra costs include legal fees, moving, installation for telephones, cablevision and heavy appliances.

Last year was a buyers' market because prices were down due to a general business slow down. But realtors feel the pendulum is beginning to swing back.

Tom Loney, city planner for the municipality of Saanich, thinks the single family dwelling is "ingrained in North American culture but sometimes doesn't return in taxes what it costs the city in services."

He feels there should be a wide variety of accommodation available such as town houses, condominiums, apartments and single family dwellings.

He thinks single dwellings can use a great deal of land to house a low number of people.

Loney pointed out that more apartments than single family units were built in Saanich in the last two years in keeping with a cross-Canada trend.

A new home to the McIvers means freedom to barbecue and own a dog

TO PROTECT CHILDREN, ELDERLY

Flameproof Fabrics on the Way In

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four thousand Americans, mostly infants and elderly, die in their cribs and nursing homes each year because their nightwear, bed sheets and carpets go up in flames. Another 250,000 are injured in fires fed by flammable fabrics.

The government acted July 28 to stem this human holocaust by setting flameproofing standards for children's sleepwear, and action which could turn the stagnant non-flammable fabrics business into an annual half billion dollar bonanza. After July 30, 1973, said the commerce department, all children's sleepwear must meet stiffer flameproofing standards or get off the market. As much as 25 per cent of all U.S. broadwoven fabrics could be affected. And some economists predict the new regulation will mean a 30 per cent annual growth rate for the companies involved in flame retardant materials.

Dupont, leader in this field, estimates the children's sleepwear market alone will generate $200 million in sales. Carborundum, Owens-Corning, American Viscose and Monsanto also have vested interests, and, like Dupont, are pushing new uses for non-flammable fabrics.

Help for Press

PARIS (Reuter) — Interior Minister Raymond Marcellin has ordered the appointment in France of special "press policemen" to help reporters during riots or street demonstrations. The officers, to be selected from police ranks, will have sufficient seniority to mediate in quarrels between police and reporters during demonstrations.

Escaped Unharmed

The best known is Dupont's Nomex, a flame-resistant member of the nylon family. Racing driver Wally Dallenback was engulfed by flames during the 1970 running of the Trenton (N.J.) 300 and walked away with just a blister on one hand because he wore a Nomex suit. "If it weren't for that (suit) I wouldn't look too good today," he said.

Nomex is difficult to burn even at 800 degrees Fahrenheit. It doesn't drip or melt; just chars. It also resists stain and soiling, chemicals and acids, won't shrink, dries quickly, insulates against heat and cold and lasts six to 15 times longer than cotton garments treated with flame retardants.

More Economical

After testing it in 1969, the Veterans Administration moved toward equipping its 165-hospital system with Nomex pajamas, even though they cost about $10 a pair compared to about $3 for cotton nightwear. Nomex proved more economical on a per-wear basis, withstanding 1,600 washings to 60-80 for the cottons.

Pit areas at the 1971 Sebring, Fla., race were protected by Nomex coverings. The Cleveland fire department ordered turnout coats of that material. Workers in Alcoa's powders and pigment plants in Rockdale, Tex., Alcoa, Tenn. and New Kensington, Pa. wear it. So do Humble Oil refinery workers at Linden, N.J.

Up until now, because of the cost factor, such non-flammable materials were used largely in esoteric areas such as space, racing and fire jumping suits. Dupont, for instance, sold 140,000 square yards of Nomex for car racing in 1970, about 25 per cent more than the year before.

Now that the government has opened up the children's sleepwear market, producers are suggesting wider uses for non-flammable fabrics.

They range all over the marketing lot. Industrial uniforms, sportwear (the material is soft), thermal gloves and underwear, upholstery (some commercial jets already have it), mattress pads, blankets, linens, ironing board covers, pollution filters for industrial smokestacks and electrical insulation.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh McLeod: now retired here

Couple Looks Back On 50 Years of Work

elizabeth forbes

It's well over 50 years ago now that Miss Doreen Taggart of Ottawa and Hugh Allister McLeod of Owen Sound, Ont., met at Queens University. She was looking ahead to a career in school teaching. He was dedicated to becoming a minister.

They became engaged.

After graduation, Miss Taggart did teach school for two years while Hugh McLeod finished his training and was given a small United Church mission at Loseland, Saskatchewan, a community of 125 men, women, and children.

People didn't travel back and forth like they do now, so the young couple did not see each other for over a year. Then, on Sept. 1, 1921, they were married and went back to Loseland to their first home.

'Church-Going Town'

Now, 50 years later—and living in retirement in Victoria, the McLeods look at each other and smile as they think back over their married life.

From Loseland they went to Wolseley, Sask. "a great church-going town." There twin sons were born, Donald and Hugh McLeod.

Churches in Medicine Hat and Saskatoon came next. Also a third son Charles joined the twins. The family then went to Edmonton and from there came to First United Church here.

Ten years were spent in Victoria from 1938 to 1948, then a further 12 years at Knox Presbyterian Church in Winnipeg, one of the two oldest United churches west of the Great Lakes.

"I'd been 40 years in the ministry by then and it seemed a fitting time to retire," McLeod reminisces.

"He had even set a time — October, 1960," Mrs. McLeod recalls.

Before that date rolled around he was named moderator of the United Church in Canada for a two-year term, with headquarters in Toronto.

While he was moderator the McLeods travelled extensively, back and forth across Canada and around the world, visiting mission fields, especially in India, Japan and Hong Kong.

During all the years, McLeod was active in the United Church. Doreen McLeod has been at his side, matching him step by step, in her own right as a woman of many talents and with an abiding interest in the work of the church.

Wherever they have lived she has been active in promoting women's work and in organizing women's groups. "From the sidelines" that interest still continues today.

Asked to say what events stand out in their years of service, the McLeods look at each other and shake their heads. "There are so many," they tell you, almost in unison.

Hong Kong Graves

Then McLeod adds "perhaps for me it was an invitation to speak to the general assembly for the Church of Scotland in Edinburgh . . . and also the privilege of laying a wreath at Canadian soldiers graves in Hong Kong . . . there are so many Winnipeg boys sleeping there."

Mrs. McLeod lists with pride the honorary degrees conferred on her husband — from Queens and Toronto Universities and from St. John's Anglican College "the first non-Anglican to receive a degree there in 100 years."

Then she speaks of the official opening of Memorial University in Newfoundland, when Lord Thomson of Fleet was named chancellor and her husband received an honorary doctorate of laws.

In more personal vein they look back to their 25th wedding anniversary reception held in First United Church here and arranged "almost as a surprise" by the women's association headed then by Mrs. R. L. Cox.

"We were in eastern Canada at the time and arrived back to find arrangements made and all we had to do was take our place in the receiving line."

Three Sons Coming

Next Wednesday afternoon they will again stand in a receiving line in First United Church's Fellowship Hall, from 3 to 5:30 p.m. to welcome all their friends on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The three sons and their wives will be with them — Donald from Montreal, Hugh from Thunder Bay and Charles from Winnipeg. Mrs. McLeod's sister, Miss Helen Taggart and a cousin Miss Helena Jones who was flower girl at the wedding are coming from Ottawa, as well as old friends from Edmonton, Winnipeg and New Westminster.

Another highlight in a life of service that has been fully shared by this husband-and-wife team.

Puritanical Marriages Happiest According to Clergyman's Research

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The more puritanical a couple is about sex, the greater the likelihood they will have a happy marriage according to a research project by a clergyman.

The study said that Fundamentalist Christians tend to have happier marriages than Catholics and Liberal Protestants.

The study of 208 couples in the Los Angeles area was conducted gy the Rev. Allan G. Snider, a pastor of an Assembly of God Church, and submitted as a doctoral dissertation in sociology at the University of Southern California.

He said that of the Pentecostal, or Fundamentalist, couples surveyed, 48 per cent were classified as having achieved "highest marital adjustment."

The more liberal the religion, the lower the incidence of high adjustment, the study said.

Only 31 per cent of Evangelical denomination Protestants rated the highest level, 30 per cent of Catholics and 22 per centt of liberal Protestants.

The more puritanical — and rigid—a couple's view of sex, the greater the likelihood they would rank among the "highly adjusted" couples, the clergyman said.

Snider said he was not attempting to show a cause-and-effect relationship but does believe religion affects the marriage.

He said the fundamentalists believe in a strict and literal interpretation of the Bible which "leads to a firm assignment of roles in a marriage: the husband is the head of the home . . .

"In contrast again, the liberal Protestants are more equalitarian; the husband-wife roles are less clearly defined and are changing."

He said he believed the differences in the way the religious groups conduct services has an effect.

The fundamentalist churches hold services that are highly emotional and serve as a kind of psychotherapy, he said, while the Catholics conduct ritualistic services and the liberal protestants worship in a more reserved and intellectual manner.

Not Missing After All

SEATTLE (AP) — A New York man reported missing on a boat trip from Vancouver to Bellingham was contacted Wednesday at Blakely Island, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

A coast guard spokesman said Stan Sleeth of Maryland, N.Y., had not encountered trouble but had failed to notify his son he would not return to Bellingham Monday as planned earlier.

Together, it is ours to keep and to build.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

FRIDAY NIGHT MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "Doctor Faustus." A vague, often too confusing attempt by Richard Burton, who co-produced and co-directed as well as starred in this film adaptation of Christopher Marlowe's clasis about a 16th century aging alchemist who turns to black magic for "four and twenty years" of living splendor and voluptuousness. Burton plays Faustus and Elizabeth Taylor flits through the picture as Helen of Troy. It's a self-indulgence, and one suspects Burton is happy now that he got it out of his system.

★ ★ ★

TOMMY HUNTER. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Guests tonight include singers Mike Graham, Myrna Lorrie and the Stoneman Family. Myrna sings Harper Valley PTA and Dream Sweet Dreams of Me. Regulars the Allen Sisters sing For All We Know, Mike sings Baby Needs New Shoes and Tommy offers Sugarfoot Rag and Men with Broken Dreams.

★ ★ ★

ODD COUPLE. 9:30 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun). "The Hideaway." Would you believe that a super college football star from Alaska A and M is being led down the corrupt path to professional football, when he could be at the Eastern Conservatory of Music studying the cello? It's the sad truth, until Felix takes the football hero in two, and also employs Oscar's persuasive power to talk the grid star out of going into the pros. Reni Santoni plays the football star.

★ ★ ★

"LEAVING HOME BLUES." 10 p.m., Channel 5. A special NBC News "white paper" on rural migration, the program will focus on the mass move of 30,000,000 Americans forced to move into urban areas because the imachine age took away their jobs in rural areas. Garrick Ufley will narrate this revealing and well-done documentary.

Mark Spitz Gets Second Swim Crown

HOUSTON (AP) — World record holder Mark Spitz of Carmichael, Calif., won a duel down the stretch with Jerry Heidenreich to take the men's 200-metre freestyle Thursday night and become the first double winner in the National Amateur Athletic Union swimming championships.

Spitz finished the race in 1:54.74, close to his 1:54.3 world record.

Linda Johnson of the Lakewood, Calif., Swim Club won the women's 200-metre freestyle title.

Jenny Bartz of the Santa Clara, Calif., Swim Club won the women's 400-metre individual medley in 5:08.382, well ahead of Leslie Cliff of Vancouver at 5:10.225.

Accusations Flew At Haney Inquest

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Tempers flared and accusations flew Thursday at a second inquest into a fatal Boxing Day accident in Haney, in the Fraser Valley.

Two lawyers, Thomas Griffith and T. K. Fisher, clashed angrily in a debate over the type of questions they should be permitted to ask witnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Johnson and three of their five children died in the two-car crash, which also involved a car driven by off-duty RCMP Constable Orville Nickel.

Chief Provincial Coroner Glen McDonald told Griffith, representing the Johnson estate: "If you don't like the way I'm handling this inquest then you can go to a high court to get a writ to have it stopped."

During the angry debate Fisher accused Griffith of attempting to crucify his client, Constable Nickle.

Fisher also suggested later to Robert Mussallem that the Mussallem family of Haney has a vendetta against Nickel. "Absolutely not," replied witness Robert, son of Dewdney MLA George Mussallem. "I would like to know what the vendetta is."

Two flareups began when Griffith asked the MLA, who also viewed the accident scene, what he would have done if it had been his grandson or a neighbor's boy in the vehicle.

Interjected Fisher: "Your eulogizing will not return the Johnsons to earth. And eulogizing by me will never remove the scarring from Nickel done to him by the media."

Griffith contended his questions were pertinent and he wanted to discuss the actions of RCMP at the scene. "The accident involved a young man, an off-duty RCMP officer who was travelling at a great speed over the speed limit."

Interjected Fisher, "What you are trying to do is crucify that boy (Nickel) again."

The MLA was asked by Fisher whether he was responsible for the new inquest. "I guess you could say that," he replied. "I happen to be the MLA from the area and subject to extensive pressure from citizens.

"I had to report to the attorney-general that the situation was far from satisfactory and something had to be done."

Another son of the MLA, David Mussallem, said he wanted to take two of the occupants of the Johnson vehicle to hospital before the ambulance arrived. He said it was possible that RCMP were under instructions not to touch accident victims until ambulance crews arrived on the scene.

"That may be the proper procedure but in efforts of life-saving they should do more. I think it should be reviewed."

B.C. Futurity Split Into Two Divisions

VANCOUVER — Richest race of the B.C. racing season, the B.C. Futurity for two-year-olds was split into two divisions when entries were taken at Exhibition Park Thursday.

Each division will have gross purse of $20,745, with the winner to receive $12,981.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hall's Timber Music will be the likely choice in the first division which has drawn such other juvenile stars as Danske's Boy, Ole Bill C, Aviemore, Promised Circle, Rebel Robert, Uncle, Taltos and Tays Talent.

The second division is regarded as an open heat with Les and Mary Gilmore's Patti Ruth and A. E. Wrayton's Hard Runner as possibly the ones which will command the most attention.

Others in the second division are Mee Lie, Nine O'Clock Gun, Northern Award, Madley Magic, Brennen and Shawnex.

The race is at 6½ furlongs.

Andy Seeking Coaching Job

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Andy Bathgate, veteran of more than 15 years in the National Hockey League, said Thursday he is quitting professional hockey and hopes to become a player-coach in Switzerland.

Bathgate said he is having difficulty acquiring his amateur card which would enable him to join Ambry Piotta, the Swiss senior amateur team which has offered him a job.

He said Vancouver Canucks, who acquired his playing rights from Pittsburgh Penguins in the reverse draft this summer, are reluctant to release him.

Tax Bill Obscure

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association says in a brief prepared for Finance Minister Edgar Benson that Canada's new tax reform bill is unintelligible, obscure and full of loopholes and mistakes.

The 76-page brief says many provisions are "virtually unintelligible" at first reading because their purpose is often obscurred by the method of presentation. It says legislation should be understandable to lay persons, not just experts.

Many concepts in the new legislation have never existed in Canadian tax law before, the association says.

To integrate them "a completely new taxation vocabulary, the mastering of which might be likened to the difficulty of learning a new language," has been established.

Make That The Rock Of Ages

ORANGEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Promoter James Elwood Hill, blocked in an attempt to hold a rock festival here, now plans to stage a religious rally.

Chief Justice Dalton Wells ruled Thursday that Mr. Hill would not be allowed to hold the festival at his park on the Labor Day weekend. Neighbors did not want it.

Following Chief Justice Wells' approval of an injunction, Mr. Hill, 54, issued an open invitation to ministers, priests, rabbis and people of all faiths to meet in the park the same weekend for a prayer rally.

Mr. Hill's Rock Hill Park has been a site for outdoor entertainment for 16 years but its last two productions have been rock festivals which have heated tempers to the boiling point both for and against festivals.

"Boyhood friends haven't talked to me for two years because I brought rock festivals into the area," Mr. Hill said in an interview.

"There's so much bitterness that my wife has lost her job as organist at the church because people wouldn't attend services with her present."

Jetliner Disobeyed Rules

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Senator Robert Cotton, Australian civil aviation minister, said Friday a Canadian Pacific Airlines DC-8 jetliner had disobeyed instructions to leave a runway at Sydney's international airport shortly before it collided with a Trans-Australia Airlines Boeing 727 in January.

No one was hurt.

Cotton was giving an explanation of the collision in a written reply to a parliamentary question.

He said the CPA plane was instructed to leave the runway via a taxiway after landing at night.

Cotton said that instead it taxied back along the runway, where a departing Trans-Australia domestic flight had been cleared for takeoff.

He said the crew of the TAA Boeing did not see the light of the DC-8 at the start of takeoff and when they did recognize the obstruction to their path, they elected to continue in the hope of being able to overfly the obstructing aircraft.

Cotton said the 727 struck the tail of the CPA flight causing substantial damage to both planes.

The 727 subsequently made a safe landing without injury on either aircraft.

Cotton said a detailed investigation of the accident is being conducted by the department of civil aviation and the report is expected to be ready by the end of next month.

UBCM to Weigh Park Protection

Parks should be free from mining claims, the Captial Regional District, says in a resolution to be considered by the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities in Victoria next month.

The district says mining and prospecting under the Mineral Act "enjoys enormous privileges appropriate to the public need of the 19th century."

It pointed to the increase in population, the need for parks and open space for public recreation and enjoyment and "under the Mineral Act mining claims may be staked and minerals mined in both municipal and regional parks."

The resolution asks that the provincial government be requested to ament the act at the next legislative session to give parks "the same protection from mining and prospecting that is presently enjoyed only by a building, a curtilage (adjoining land) of a dwelling, an orchard, cultivated land and military reservations."

These are places where no mining claims can be staked.

In East Sooke Regional Park, which the regional district bought last year, there are a number of mining claims which have existed for years.

The Capital Regional District is also seeking support for resolutions to put regional districts on the same basis as municipalities in zoning and land use contracts, instead of needing provincial approval.

The Capital Regional Hospital District, saying that such districts have no authority to expropriate land for new hospitals and this could result in hospitals being "built in less desirable locations and could involve the public in paying excessive prices for land," asks for a legislative amendment to permit districts to expropriate for this use.

The UBCM convention will be held in the Esquimalt Sports Centre Sept. 15-16-17.

FISHERIES SERVICE SPLITS COAST REGION

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Fisheries Service announced Thursday that the west coast is being split into two main geographical regions to provide better service for commercial and recreational fishermen.

W. R. Hourston, regional director of the service, said the Pacific Region has been reorganized into northern and southern operating branches for direct management purposes, with the nothern tip of Vancouver Island forming the dividing line.

The northern operations branch will have responsibility for all phases of management north of Vancouver Island, including all coastal and interior areas in B.C. and the Yukon.

The southern operations branch will be responsible for fisheries management in all other coastal areas and the Fraser and Kootenay watersheds.

The region will have four new branches — the planning support branch, special program branch industrial service branch and a common service branch to assist in short and long-term planning and operations.

To Try Again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Diplomatic sources predicted today that Gunnar V. Jarring will make a new effort next month to get the Israelis and Arabs talking.

They said Jarring, the Swedish ambassador to Moscow, will arrive in New York about mid-September to resume his role as special UN envoy for the Middle East. He will begin by talking with the Israeli and Arab foreign ministers who are coming to New York for the UN General Assembly.

Jarring has been trying since the end of 1967 to get the adversaries of the six-day war to open negotiations for a settlement. The closest he has come was indirect talks last winter between the Israeli, Egyptian and Jordanian delegates to the United Nations with Jarring acting as go-between. Neither the Jews nor the Arabs gave any ground, and Jarring went back to Moscow.

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Police on Vancouver Island were searching today for two prisoners who fled this morning from the Snowden forest camp near Campbell River.

Authorities identified the escapees as Lucky Purcie Nelson, 22, and Edward William Henderson, 39.

East Block Evacuated

OTTAWA (CP) — A small fire, quickly extinguished, resulted in the early morning evacuation of the East Block of Parliament Hill today.

A public works official said the smoke from a smoldering tarpaulin and rug in a secretarial office that was being repainted was noticed by a secretary when she arrived at work.

The building, which contains the office of Prime Minister Trudeau, was quickly evacuated, he said. But no damage was caused and people went back to work as soon as the fire was put out.

A burning cigarette likely caused the fire, he said.

Permit Issued

A building permit has been issued in Sidney for a 12-lane tivepin bowling establishment to cost $200,000.

The building, already under construction, will open for business next January at Fifth and Beacon. The permit was issued by council Thursday to Harry Welch, representing the Sidney Bowling Association.

MINNEAPOLIS — Seven years ago, Doris Keppler was robbed of $10.23 by a thief who beat her so hard she lost her hearing. After a few years, however, a doctor told her an operation could restore her hearing. The cost would be some $500, he said.

Mrs. Keppler, 51, and her husband, Harry, began saving for it. They reached their goal recently, Wednesday, after Keppler got home from work the two went out to dinner.

When they returned, they found a burglar had broken into their home and stolen the $500, along with Mrs. Keppler's jewelry. Said Keppler: "I guess we'll just have to start saving all over again."

LOS ANGELES — Anthony J. Russo, 34, jailed for refusing to tell a grand jury how Daniel Ellsberg took the secret Pentagon papers, has been put in solitary confinement for refusing to cut his hair. This was revealed here Thursday by Judge William Gray who ordered Russo jailed Aug. 16.

KANSAS CITY — Pat Cipolla, 37, got a tug-of-war with a purse-snatching elephant and lost.

Mrs. Cipolla was helping a child into a chair on the back of the elephant, Starlight, at Kansas City Zoo. Starlight suddenly turned and grabbed Mrs. Cipolla's purse with her trunk.

Starlight tugged. Mrs. Cipolla pulled.

The purse strap broke, with Starlight still in possession. Mrs. Cipolla tumbled from the four-foot ladder used to help children climb on Starlight's back. She suffered a slight sprain of her right ankle.

The purse was recovered.

NEW YORK — Every month since the New York State lottery began in 1967, seven women in Albany have chipped in to buy tickets together. Thursday it all paid off. The women, all employees of the state retirement system, won the $1 million top lottery prize. "I'm going to empty the water out of my swimming pool and fill it with champagne," said Mrs. Peg Keyes, one of the winners.

The win also means a $10,000 incentive award will go to Bill Keenan, a blind newspaper vendor in Albany who sold the ticket to the women. The winners were Mrs. Keyes, Mrs. Mary McGovern, Mrs. Mary Luther, Mrs. Anna Moore, Mrs. Helena Dana, Mrs. Eva Ulmer and Mrs. Betty Healey.

LONDON — Prince Richard of Gloucester, 27-year-old cousin of The Queen, was evasive today about reports he plans to marry Birgitte Van Deurs, a 24-year-old Danish secretary. Mini Cyclamens a Garden Delight

By HILDA BEASTALL

If you are the new owner of an old garden, you may have noticed this past week the appearance of dainty little pink and white flowers on slender three or four inch stems.

You think they look like winter pot plant cyclamens, in miniature, but why outdoors at the base of a tree or near shrubs?

You are right, these tiny, exquisitely modelled flowers belong to the hardy, outdoor cyclamens, and you can have different species in bloom at any season of the year outdoors.

Hilda

The one which suddenly shot up its delightful little blooms the day after the rain shower at the weekend, belongs in the Cyclamen neapolitanum group, one of the most prolific and easiest to grow in local gardens.

The dappled sunshine and shade beneath shrub or tree foliage constantly shifting in the breeze is an ideal situation.

Drainage in winter is as necessary as for most other plants. The soil should be rather loose and crumbly at the surface as a rooting medium for the numerous progeny resulting from self sown seeds.

The cycle of growth of C. neapolitanum has much of interest for the observant gardener.

Supposing you purchase in fall a three-inch pot containing a tiny growing tuber, (this is preferable to buying dormant tubers) topped with three of these exquisite flowers. There are no leaves at present, but later they too push through the soil and add their dainty form and wonderful marbling of silver on dark green to your total miniature scene.

Meanwhile the flowers fade, and you forget about them until one day in spring you notice the tightly coiled, pinkish stems close to the soil, like a fine pink wire spring.

These are the seed capsules which have been sheltered beneath the leaves all winter. The leaves wither in spring, exposing the capsules to ripen in summer sun and warmth.

A week or so before the first flowers appear in late summer, the coiled springs are released, the capsules open and shed the seeds round about the parent plant.

With a gentle sprinkling of rain or other water, seedlings will soon be seen. Variations of leaf marbling and shape occur, and pure white flowers also come among the seedlings, so that a delightfully different little colony of miniatures is born in your garden.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

It is an obvious fact that to get the maximum out of his cards, one must listen closely to the bidding of his opponents, for therein valuable clues are frequently contained. In today's deal, the West defender has my deepest sympathy. He had listened closely to the North-South bidding, and he came up with a presumably sound opening lead. But, unfortunately for his side, the opponents were not telling the truth in their bidding.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇ (!)	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ◇.

Lest the reader assume that West's opening lead of the diamond eight is a typographical error, let me state that it is not. The following was West's justification for his lead.

On his rebid, South had bid three diamonds (no one will ever know why), which North had raised to four diamonds. From West's position, South had four diamonds, as did North for his raise. Since West was also the possessor of four diamonds, East figure to have a singleton.

Therefore West assumed that East would be able to ruff a second diamond lead. And West also knew that he would be able to lead a second diamond for East to trump, since West had to get the lead somewhere along the line with his trump ace.

On the opening diamond lead dummy's ten was played, East covered with the queen, and South captured the trick with his king. A trump lead was then made, West's ace winning. A second diamond lead was now made, as planned, by West — and much to his surprise (and anguish), East followed suit as South won the trick with his nine-spot.

From here in declarer's sailing was smooth, since, after drawing trumps, he was able to discard one of his losers on dummy's fourth diamond.

Had West ignored the North-South bidding, he would have cashed his two top spades at tricks one and two. He would next have played his ace of hearts, after which he would have made a "neutral" exit by leading a club.

The success of declarer's contract would now have depended on his guessing whether to finesse East or West for the queen of diamonds. As to whether he would have guessed correctly is conjectural.

If one judges by results, West's opening lead was a poor one. But I, for one, find it difficult to criticize him for his choice.

Paintings Recovered

GENOA, Italy (Reuter) — Police recovered 20 stolen pictures valued at about $750,000 and arrested one man Thursday. They said the pictures, mainly of the 17th century and several by the French painter Jean Vernet, disappeared in recent thefts from castles and villas in the Piedmont region.

fun with figures

By EAU CLAIRE HUNTER

Doug was busy at the table. "I figured out something on our number, and the number of Peter's home," he said. "If you add our first two digits to twice the square of the last digit you get our number."

"That's odd," his father commented. "Seventeen plus twice the square of nine. It does make 179."

"Sure," declared Doug. "Peter also has a three figure number, and it works the same way except that it's three times the square instead of twice."

What was Peter's number?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: VERA was 5098.

Hotel Rooms New Newsroom

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — The staff of The Times operated from a hotel room today as reporters and editors worked on the big local story of the day—a fire Thursday night that partially destroyed their newspaper building.

Managing Editor Paul Tissington, working from temporary offices in the Hotel Genosha here, said The Times planned to publish today, using the printing facilities of the Peterborough Examiner. Both papers are owned by Thomson Newspapers Ltd.

Mr. Tissington said the fire broke out about 10:30 p.m. Thursday. It apparently started in Cherney's Furniture store which occupied rented space on the main floor and basement at the front of the three-storey building.

No one was injured and damage has not been estimated.

WONDERS OF EMILY

TORONTO (CP) — The Wonders of It All, a musical on West Coast painter Emily Carr, will be taped at the CBC studios here Dec. 23 after years of legal entanglements over Copyright.

The musical, by Don Harron and Norman Campbell, will run for 90 minutes without commercials. The taping comes nine days after the centenary of Miss Carr's birth.

The producers say the show will not be presented at the Charlottetown Festival as originally planned, but may be made into a movie.

Early Start Settles Chess Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dispute over scheduling that threatened to disrupt the Canadian open chess championship appeared to have been settled Thursday night with a decision to propose earlier-starting final matches.

Most of the seven international grandmasters and masters at the open have been invited to attend a $4,000 tournament beginning Sept. 4 at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. However, the Vancouver competition was not scheduled to end until nearly midnight Sept. 3.

It was reported some of the players had threatened to pull out of the open if the final round of play were not begun earlier, allowing them time to go east.

However, by the final round of play it is expected that the masters will be playing each other and it would not inconvenience anyone else if they were to start earlier in the day. Initially, President Dave Wight of the B.C. Chess Federation had refused to condone earlier startings than already scheduled because he thought it would be unfair to more junior players.

MASTERS WIN

Thursday's round at the University of British Columbia again came off without a hitch for the masters.

Australian grandmaster Walter Browne defeated R. Smook of Guelph, Ont., in only 10 moves.

American grandmaster Paul Benko needed 38 moves to defeat R. W. Avery of the U.S., while world champion Boris Spassky of Moscow handled John MacPhail of Ottawa with relative ease. Lubimor Kavalek of the U.S. defeated American Craig Barnes.

Canadian champion Duncan Suttles of Vancouver downed Ed Durrant of London, Ont.; Zvoko Vranesic defeated fellow Torontonian Ian Hambleton while Hans Ree of Holland defeated J. M. Chrolavicius of Hamilton.

Only six other players of the 155 man field were left with perfect scores.

Former B.C. champion Bob Zuk of Surrey, who defeated South American women's champion Ruth Cardoso of Brazil Wednesday in one of the closest-fought battles of the tournament, had to settle for a draw Thursday in a game against Eugene Warner of the U.S.

'Cultural Time Bomb' On Reserves

FORT MACLEOD, Alta. (CP) — Integrated education has created a cultural time bomb on Indian reserves throughout Northern Ontario, says Walter Currie, director of Indian-Eskimo studies at Trent University in Peterborough.

"Indian kids in the 16- to 25-year-old age bracket have returned to their reserves after several years of education in white schools too wise to trap and fish but not sufficiently equipped to make it in the white man's world," Mr. Currie told an orientation conference for about 50 white persons who will be teaching Indians in southern Alberta this year.

"As a result, when they return home following their schooling they just sit and sit and sit and one day all hell is going to break loose."

Mr. Currie, an Ojibway, formerly was with the Ontario department of eudation—in charge of northern schools.

He said the way to defuse the time bomb is to realize education is not the only key to the future of Canada's Indians.

Removal of an Indian from welfare, together with development of good housing, also are important.

Before the Judge

Herbie I. Woods, 18, of West Saanich Road, needs some "supported help", according to Judge William Ostler and the judge gave it to him yesterday — four months definite and eight indefinite in prison — for stealing an auto while on probation.

Noting that Woods was put on two years probation in April for possession of an offensive weapon and theft Ostler said: "You need some supported help to break your involvement in drugs and alcohol."

He told Woods, who pleaded guilty to stealing the car June 13 on Broad St., that he would recommend his sentence be spent in a forestry camp.

Woods also pleaded guilty to driving without a licence and was sentenced to a day in jail to be served concurrently.

★ ★ ★

Vernon Reid, 49, of 550 Johnson, was sentenced to two months in prison for double-doctoring medical prescriptions.

He earlier pleaded guilty to getting methadone prescriptions refilled from several doctors in the period of August-September 1970 without telling the physicians he was seeing more than one doctor.

Reid pleaded guilty to similar offences in May and August this year.

Ostler said the accused knew the law and deliberately defied it by committing the same offence twice following the first arraignment.

The judge said he was imposing "an extremely lenient sentence because of the condition" of the accused.

Leonard Simpson, 24, of 834 Devonshire, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to putting a pair of slippers on his two-year-old son at the Woolco department store August 17 and leaving the store without paying for them.

Court was told that the accused had $240 in his possession at the time.

★ ★ ★

Harold J. Matthews, 28, of 2890 Foul Bay, was fined $100 when he pleaded guilty to committing an indecent act.

Court was told that the accused exposed himself to a woman as he sat in his car July 27.

★ ★ ★

Leonard J. Bowcott, 18, of 5383 Old West Saanich Road, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to stealing a picture poster from The Bay Thursday.

★ ★ ★

Nestor P. Melnyk, 59, of 1233 Topaz, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge Edmond St. Jorre for impaired driving.

St. Jorre suspended Melnyk's licence for four months except during working hours.

★ ★ ★

Walter J. McKinnon, 31, of 918 Cloverdale, and Norman H. L. Newsom, 25, of 330 Goldstream, were each fined $200 and prohibited from driving for three months except when working for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

FORBIDDEN PLATEAU GUIDE-SCOUT GOAL

Girl Guides and Victoria Region Boy Scouts leave Saturday for a week-long hiking and mountain climbing expedition to Forbidden Plateau.

Their goal is to climb Mount Albert Edward, a 6,868-foot peak overlooking spectacular Cruikshank Canyon.

Leonard Hawkins, 4190 Oakridge Street, is in charge of the co-ed expedition. The group will be composed of 11 Guides and 10 Venturer Scouts.

Rest Haven Sponsors

The nine sponsors of a public society which will operate a 75-bed extended care hospital in Central Saanich will meet Tuesday in Central Saanich council chambers.

The group's job it to arrange a public meeting within 50 to 70 days to detail the purposes and intentions of the new hospital society and accept memberships which will cost $1.

The society's first officers will be elected at that meeting.

Appointed sponsors by Rest Haven Hospital are A. N. Howe, E. S. White and W. Danielson. Regional hospital board appointments are Louis Lindholme and Edward Hayes of North Saanich, John Bruce and George Howard of Sidney, Claude Butler and Dr. Stanley McTavish of Central Saanich.

The new hospital, to be built on Mount Newton Crossroad in Central Saanich and to eventually include 75 acute care beds, will replace Rest Haven.

Share Losses

Victoria council voted Thursday to pay half the losses of the Chamber of Commerce theatre production Deadwood Dick which was shown during the Victorian Days celebration last spring.

The chamber had asked for $1,033.40, the full deficit. The city will pay $500.

Ald. Percy Frampton, who made the motion, said the work by the chamber was of "terrific" benefit to the city and pointed out the Victorian Days promotion campaign cost the city nothing.

Ald. Peter Pollen cast the only negative vote, calling the measure a "very, very poor expenditure of the taxpayer's money".

Victoria 'Involved' City

Victoria will become a "world city" in the near future, council agreed Thursday.

A ceremony will be held at some future date at which the city will be formally mundialized, which means becoming a world city.

Mundialization means the city involved supports the principles of the United Nations. Participation in the world-wide program, organized by the World Federalists of Canada, could involve "twinning" with another mundialized city somewhere in the world.

The city will also be expected to fly the United Nations flag at all times.

ALLOWS YEN TO FLOAT

Japan Bows to Nixon

TOKYO (CP)—Japan bowed to international pressure today and allowed its currency to float temporarily as an alternative to outright revaluation.

The action, after two weeks of trying to hold the yen to parity of 360 to the U.S. dollar, was a major victory for President Nixon's program to return U.S. trade balance in the black.

A Japanese finance ministry announcement said the yen would be freed as of Saturday to find its own exchange level against the dollar.

The announcement said that as a temporary measure the official restrictions which prevent the yen from rising or falling more than one per cent either side of its official parity would be removed.

The decision was a dramatic reversal of an announcement by the government Tuesday that no action would be taken on the yen until multi-national negotiations in mid-September.

The decision to allow the yen to float was made at an emergency meeting of senior finance ministry officials called to consider the continued confusion on the Tokyo foreign exchange markets.

The yen, which was considerably undervalued, was the chief target of Nixon's announcement Aug. 15 suspending the gold standard and putting a supplementary levy of up to 10 per cent on dutiable imports into the United States.

Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta said the floating the yen — allowing it to find its own rate according to the demand and supply—would be temporary.

Japanese commercial banks, anticipating the government's action, sold dollars heavily today on the Tokyo exchange, and the Bank of Japan bought a record $1.2 billion at the interbank rate of 357.37 yen, the usual intervention level.

The commercial banks had bought more than $500 million Tuesday and Wednesday after the central bank warned them to adhere more closely to its guidelines on required holdings. The commercial banks complained that this subjected them to undue risks since the dollar was floating on the European markets. The Bank of Japan then relaxed enforcement of its requirement, and the banks liquidated their dollar holdings.

CONTROL YEN MARGIN

Tadashi Sasaki, governor of the Bank of Japan, said in a statement that if the yen's margin of fluctuation against the dollar becomes too large, the central bank will buy dollars to stabilize the rate.

The Bank of Japan has bought about $4 billion in the last two weeks to keep the value of the yen down.

The government feared that increasing the value of the yen would cut into Japanese exports and have a deflationary effect that would intensify the sluggishness of the economy. But the pressure from abroad, and particularly the spectre of the 10-per-cent U.S. import charge, outweighed arguments in favor of standing fast.

The finance ministry said that in deciding on a temporary float, the government has not abandoned the yen's old par value.

"It is the intention of the government of Japan," it said, "to make active efforts, in collaboration with other governments, to reinforce the international monetary system so that the stability of external transactions can be restored as soon as possible," the ministry's statement said.

The finance ministry also announced that the government would submit a supplementary budget to the Diet, the Japanese parliament, to offset the effects of the U.S. import charge and also to improve "Japan's social infrastructure as well as the general standard of living."

FLOAT BOND ISSUE

Other measures will include active flotation of national bonds, additional fiscal loans and an investments program.

The announcement came after Japan's external reserves jumped to more than $12.5 billion with the huge purchase of dollars.

Uncertainty over the yen's parity caused chaos and confusion on the Tokyo stock and foreign exchange markets, and bankers and businessmen warned that the markets could not stand much more pressure.

Official sources said the decision by the finance ministry meant Japan is prepared to run risks to ascertain how much the yen is undervalued, as claimed by other nations.

The officials said the floating, which follows similar action by most of the West European currencies, meant Japan could now more or less line up with West Europe in talks on parity adjustments next year.

UNDERVALUED

The Japanese action is expected to improve greatly the U.S. balance of trade deficit which now has grown to $676.4 million since January.

On the home front, Washington reports there has been a thaw in relations with powerful U.S. labor unions.

Labor and officials will now discuss action to be taken once the wage-price freeze has been lifted on Nov. 12.

Canadian Goods Benefit From Move

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian goods which were competitive with Japanese exports in the United States now may be able to regain their position, an informant said today.

This is the likely result of Japan's decision to let the yen float in international exchange markets. But the extent of the improved climate for Canadian exports will not be known until foreign exchange trading settles down to the new situation next week.

As officials here saw it earlier this week, Japan's attempt to hold the yen at its old pegged value of 360 to the U.S. dollar, while other major currencies drifted upward, was a desperate Japanese effort to retain a trading edge.

While Japanese goods would be hit by President Nixon's 10-per-cent surcharge on imports of dutiable goods, those of other countries going into the United States would have to meet the stiff price of the 10-per-cent surcharge plus the higher cost to American buyers of securing the foreign exchange needed to pay their bills.

Floating the yen, with the pressures in exchange markets for a higher valuation on it, means that American buyers of Japanese goods will also have to pay more for Japanese goods.

To the extent that Canadian goods compete with Japanese goods in the U.S. market, the floating yen should be of some benefit to Canadian exporters, particularly if the yen moves up substantially.

The main competitive areas are believed to be in synthetic rubber and plastics, and in machinery and mechanical and electrical equipment.

Ottawa officials reportedly made "good progress" Thursday in their bid for exemption from the United States' new 10 per cent import surcharge. Deputy finance minister Simon S. Reisman said today, however, no agreement was reached at the Washington session with U.S. treasury officials, called to follow last week's meeting between Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Treasury Secretary John Connally.

CANCER SPENDING CUT

The provincial health department had $450,000 to spend on cancer control last year, but spent only $72,174.

The $377,000 under-expenditure is one of many under-expenditures revealed in the abridged public accounts released Thursday by the provincial government for the year ending March 31, 1971.

Premier Bennett clamped tight spending controls on the government during much of the year because of a slowdown in the economy and in government revues. He finished the year with a $16 million surplus.

A $600,000 public health research vote was underspent by $105,000; a $2.4 million vote for in-patient care of tuberculosis hospitals was underspent by $440,000.

"Grants for health agencies" were under-spent by $123,000 on a total budget of $600,000.

In all, the public health service under-spent its $15 million budget by $1.5 million.

The mental health branch under-spent its $37 million allocation by $3.6 million, including a $2.3 million under-expenditure on a $32 million budget for in-patient mental care. Hospital insurance services were over-spent by $2.4 million.

Striking Calgary Guards Defy Back to Work Order

CALGARY (CP) — Guards at the Calgary correctional institution went on strike today, declining to follow the example of guards at other provincial jails who returned to work quickly after being served with a court injunction.

The Calgary guards planned a meeting to discuss whether they would follow the other guards who returned to work.

Guards at all five provincial jails were served with the injunction.

The injunction expires later today but the attorney-general's department can apply for a more permanent injunction shortly before the expiration.

Ernie Lawson, employee relations officer for the Civil Service Association which represents the 575 correctional officers who had threatened to go on strike, said his group was preparing to oppose the injunction request.

However, the association would allow the correctional officers to make their own decisions on whether they would stay on the job if the government obtained a further injunction.

PREVENTS PICKETING

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said today the injunction was issued to prevent picketing, not directly to prevent a strike.

"I would never restrain a man from quitting a job he did not like," Mr. Gerhart said in an interview.

The attorney-general has stated that any correctional officer who goes on strike will be fired because such a walkout would be illegal.

RCMP ALERTED

The RCMP had been on standby alert, ready to take over duties at the institutions, when the regular guards walked off.

Few Forecast Winner In Alberta Election

EDMONTON (CP) — The final major rally of the 1971 Alberta election campaign will be held tonight in Calgary and as the Monday vote approaches, few observers are brave enough to predict the outcome.

Neither Premier Harry Strom nor Progressive Conservative Leader Peter Lougheed, the front-runners in the campaign, will predict the number of seats they will win.

"We are confident," said Premier Strom, fighting his first election as government leader a position he inherited in 1968 from E. C. Manning, now a senator.

"I sense a growing momentum and a desire for change," Mr. Lougheed told a crowd Thursday night in Edmonton's Jubilee Auditorium a rally which attracted more people than the Social Credit rally Wednesday night.

Wednesday, however, the premier and his candidates had to compete with a Western Football Conference game in the city.

The Social Crediters and Conservatives have both held their major Edmonton rallies and the premier moves into Calgary tonight.

Grant Notley, the New Democratic Party leader who attracted 1,100 persons at a Calgary rally, says any more than one seat for his party would "be a bonus." Mr. Notley is predicted as the winner in Spirit River-Fairview in northern Alberta.

Liberal Leader Bob Russell, whose party has 20 candidates in the field, is fighting a tough four-way battle in St. Albert.

The number of seats needed to form a government in the enlarged 75-seat legislature is 38. Redistribution added 10 seats. At dissolution, the Social Credit government held 54 seats, the Conservatives 10 and one seat was vacant.

The Social Credit and Conservative parties each have full slates of 75 candidates while the NDP has candidates in 70 ridings. Three independents bring the candidate total to 243.

NUDE COMPETITION NOT IN THE SCRIPT

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Three nude couples in the audience were hrown out before Thursday night's showing of Oh, Calcutta at a Stockholm theatre.

Olle Kinch, producer of the controversial nude play, told the three girls and three young men: "We don't want any competition between our people on the stage and the audience."

THE GOOD LIFE FOR INFORMERS

MARSEILLES, France (Reuter) — The United States bureau of narcotics offered big rewards and a comfortable life abroad Thursday to any Frenchmen giving information which would help smash drug rings operating near this Mediterranean port.

The offer came from European bureau chief John Cusak, who also suggested that French police deliberately overlooked the drug traffic here.

U.S. authorities have estimated that the bulk of hard core drugs reaching the United States from the Middle East passes through Marseilles.

Cusak offered to "compensate big rewards to informers as well as "the means to live in safety outside France if the person compromised himself."

Ottawa Sets Up Security Group

OTTAWA (CP) — A security group to advise the cabinet and federal government on threats to the national social, political and economic order has been set up by the solicitor-general's department.

A department spokesman said today the force—called the security planning and research group—now has three members and will probably develop to 20 persons.

Although Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, vacationing in Europe, was not available for comment, the spokesman said the group will gather and analyse information "from all sources" and report to cabinet.

It was set up so "the government can anticipate things before they happen," the spokesman said. It will gather and report information "that might appear from non-military, subversive groups."

Although it has no direct connection with other police forces, the group will have close liason with the RCMP and other forces.

The spokesman said the group was set up partly because of the October crisis in Quebec. At that time "there was a great deal of confusion and information was not getting to the right people quickly enough."

The group now is composed of Col. Robin Bourne, a former adviser to the Privy Council in internal security and an artillery officer, Lt.-Col. Walter Dabros, a former member of the armed forces security branch and S. Sgt. Patrick Banning, formerly of the RCMP.

The three have no assigned budget, but are receiving salaries, the spokesman said. The department will spent about $20,000 on the group this year.

"But that depends on how quickly they recruit."

Legal Pot Draws Fire

By JAMIE UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Most early reaction to the report of the federal committee on youth dealt with only one of its 29 recommendations: The proposed legalization of such cannabis drugs as marijuana and hashish.

Police spokesman, medical authorities and drug-abuse workers joined in disapproval of the proposal, rejecting it at least until more is known about the effects of the drugs. A few civil rights workers supported it.

"It is for the birds," said Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer.

Most officials declined comment on other committee proposals until they have studied the report. However, Saul Miller, Manitoba's minister of youth and education, said he agreed with recommendations for a new student loan program and the committee rejection of a $10 monthly payment to encourage students to stay in school until 18.

But the committee's recommendation on cannabis, which said existing laws against soft drugs are untenable, drew plenty of fire.

PREDICTED REACTION

Vincent Kelly, a Toronto civil rights lawyer and member of the three-man committee, predicted the reaction Thursday when he expressed dismay at the emphasis news reports gave to the cannabis recommendation.

"Our worst fears have been realized," he said.

David Lewis, leader of the federal New Democratic Party, said he agrees that possession of marijuana should be removed from the Criminal Code but from reports on the recommendations "it sounds a little wild."

Robert Welch, Ontario minister of education, termed the cannabis recommendation irresponsible.

The Canadian Medical Association opposed the legalization of soft drugs because, it said, not enough is known about their effects.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal treasury had a $39-million deficit in government budgetary accounts in July, bringing the surplus for the first four months of the current fiscal year down to $497 million, the finance department reported Thursday.

Cows, Dogs Sensed' Quebec Killer Slide

MONTREAL (CP) — A herd of cows and two dogs apparently sensed the St. Jean Vianney landslide disaster three hours before it happened, investigators revealed in a preliminary report Thursday.

The massive earthglide swept through the small town 115 miles north of Quebec City May 4, moving 15 million tons of earth, swallowing up 40 homes and killing 31 persons.

The report was prepared by three investigators led by Quebec government geologist Jean-Yves Chagnon.

The investigators studied the terrain and interviewed dozens of area residents for information on the slide which swept through the town of 1,300 as many were preparing for bed.

Pitre Blackburn, a farmer, testified that he was unable to send his cows back to their grazing land at about 7:30 p.m. on the night of the disaster. The slide occurred three hours later.

"The cows, though usually docile, refused two attempts to put them out in the field so that Mr. Blackburn had to leave them in the barn," the report said.

The field was washed away by the slide, the report added.

Two other disaster survivors reported that their dogs began behaving "abnormally" around 7 p.m. The animals were described as being extremely nervous.

One man said his dog acted the same as he did during a thunderstorm.

Both pet owners saw their streets torn in half by the slide.

A chilling description of the disaster was given to investigators by Mrs. Roger Filion. She reported that Mrs. Lise Laforge, who perished along with her three children in the slide, called her between 10:30 and 10:45 p.m.

Mrs. Laforge asked Mrs. Filion if she felt a slight earthquake. She said she could suddenly see the lights of the city of Chicoutimi from a window in her home.

This was unusual because the view of the city had been previously obstructed from the Laforge home by a hill 30-feet high. But the hill was swallowed up in the slide and moments later the Laforge home went with it taking Mrs. Laforge and her three children to their deaths.

Bus driver Jules Girard said he was driving his bus when he slowed down to pass over what appeared to be a small gully in the gravel road.

"However, as the front wheels of the bus reached the gully, the soil in front of the vehicle just 'disappeared' and the bus got stuck on the edge of the slide with its front wheels in the air," the report said.

Girard ordered the 18 passengers to escape via the rear door and was the last man to leave the bus. He then ran in a westerly direction, describing the sensation of the 150-foot climb as like running on moving stairs."

He had time to warn the inhabitants of one house on the way but could not get to three other houses.

Mr. Gerard saw the three houses disappear into the crater with a sudden, vertical movement the report said.

He also saw a car driving down the road disappear into the crater.

Previous work outlined copper-zinc and copper-iron mineralization.

Gr. Lakes

Great Lakes Paper Co. has cut its October dividend 50 per cent to 10 cents a share because of lower earnings and need to maintain a strong financial position.

The company said earnings are off primarily because of a drop in dollar exchange value, along with higher labor and operating costs.

From early in 1964 the quarterly dividend rate was 25 cents a share, which fell this year to 20 cents.

Shell-Esso has won a licence to search for oil and gas in British North Sea waters northeast of the Shetland Islands with a bid of $51.4 million.

The Shell-Esso combination was among winners in an experimental tender for 15 blocks of British North Sea areas which will give the government $89 million.

Sales for the first quarter declined 12 per cent from 1970 and 4 per cent compared with the average for the five preceding corresponding periods.

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1971 —PAGE 19

FATAL ACE

On the High Cost Of Being Perfect

My long-time golfing rival, Mr. Jack "The Knife" Webster, came within four blades of grass of scoring a hole-in-one earlier this week over the water at the fourth of Royal Colwood and expressed his mortification with his customary restraint.

He flung himself prone upon the tee, beating the turf with his pudgy fists and bellowing at the fickle fates that had deprived him of every golfer's wildest dream. His disappointment was, as they say, manifest.

As some solace to the poor boob I spent the rest of the rounds telling him of my friend Wiggin Morgan, as I'll call him, who aced the second at Oak Bay in my presence and was never quite the same ever again.

It is a story that should be known to all golfers and, indeed, may have some philosophical connotations for every man who aspires to any ultimate experience.

Wiggin, a high handicapper like myself, responded to the miracle with great joy, bought the usual rounds of drinks and seemed none the worse for his experience. I would not have dreamed that it could have had such a traumatic effect on his life and his character as, we shall see, it sure enough did.

Most golfers might be expected to be somewhat tiresome in recounting such a triumph and easily forgiven for it, considering that the odds against it are in excess of a million to one. Wiggin was not exactly tiresome. He was unbearable.

He had evolved the notion, you see, that it was not luck so much as skill. "I knew it would go in," he would say to anyone in the locker room who had not managed to drift out of conversational orbit. "For some strange reason everything I did in that one single shot was so perfect that I did not even have to look up to know that it was going in the hole. It was a strange experience, almost as if I were being given divine guidance . . ." And so he'd go on, unmindful of the fixed smiles and rolling eyes of his listeners.

A week or two of this was enough to isolate him from even the most tolerant club members. He then took to describing the event, in every minute detail, at social gatherings and business meetings. Within a very short time he became known as a man to avoid.

★ ★ ★

It was about this time that Wiggin's wife left him and, worse, as every true golfer will recognize, his game began to go to pieces. Having experienced that one magnificent moment of pure perfection he could abide nothing less. Even his regular foursome finally wearied of his constant muttering and cursing and found excuses to join other groups.

It was no good trying to joke with him. Wiggin's closest friend reported that he had tried this when Wiggin had put on an almost comical performance of ineptness, turning the first nine in 69 strokes, and missing the ball entirely on the 18th tee.

"Is this the fellow who once scored a hole in one?" Wiggin's companion jested, whereupon Wiggin lashed at him viciously with his Arnold Palmer driver. Fortunately his swing had gone to pieces so thoroughly that he missed his victim by several inches. With that, he turned and strode from the course, never to be seen again.

The story might have ended there, I told Webster, had I not chanced to meet Wiggin some two years later near the liquor store on Government Street when, not recognizing me, he shambled toward me and asked for a handout.

I was shocked at the man's appearance. He exuded the stale aroma of cheap wine. His eyes were glazed, lifeless. His clothes were in rags. I noted that he wore on his head a peaked golf cap, dirty and torn, on which words, "Victoria Golf Club" could barely be discerned. His whole body shook with the ravages of drink and poverty.

★ ★ ★

He could tell me little of the tragic events that had cast him upon life's ash heap, but mumbled away about "the selfishness of the human race" and the disloyalty of his friends. "Jealousy, that was it," he babbled at one point. "they were all jealous."

"You mean it all goes back to that lucky day when you scored your hole-in-one?" I asked.

Wiggin looked at me sharply. His eyes seem to clear miraculously and burned with a shining intensity.

"You remember that day, eh, Jack?" he said. "I knew it would go in! For some strange reason everything I did in that one single shot was . . ."

Well, as I say, Wiggin Morgan is not his real name and I have dramatized the story ever so slightly, but it is all substantially true and, even if it weren't, the moral would be clear: Never try for absolute perfection for after that life is a drag.

Victorians Jump Age Gap in Pot Poll

★ ★ ★

Views Show Concern Widespread

Victorians are divided — and not along age lines — about whether marijuana should be legalized in Canada, a Times public opinion poll showed today.

The on-the-street interviews were conducted following Thursday's report by a federal committee on youth which recommended that marijuana smoking be legalized in Canada.

The report, commissioned by the federal government, said: "Logically, it is difficult to understand how a society, unsuccessful at suppressing the use of drugs such as tobacco, alcohol and chemicals by its members, can hope to erase the use of soft drugs."

●

Mrs. Frank Hewat of 1120 Blanshard had no trouble deciding where she stood:

"It's idiotic," she said, adding that people are better off without the weed.

Her husband said no one knows enough about the drug's long-term effects and there is no guarantee that setting the smoking age at 18 will keep younger people from using pot.

Don Robinson of Esquimalt wouldn't give his address but said he had no doubt the government should legalize the drug. Canada should follow Great Britain's example and legalize heroin and prostitution as well.

This would keep the Mafia out of the world of drugs and sex, he said.

Richard Klotz of New York, a psychologist who treats drug addicts, said he was "all for legalizing marijuana." No connection between soft and hard drug use exists, he said, because narcotic addicts get hooked to satisfy emotional and psychological needs.

People use alcohol as an escape — that's legal — and pot is no worse, he said.

●

But Lorna Meichan of 3284 Alder said she read in an Ann Landers column that marijuana is harmful.

"I was reading Ann Landers and they ran a letter (from a pot smoker) and she ran it just the way it was written to them and the words were all mixed up and everything else."

Sid Boyd of 1330 Denman said marijuana is harmful to people with emotional problems. It can destroy families.

"I know, I've seen lots of cases. I've been around and I know what it can do. If drugs aren't harmful, why do so many kids try to commit suicide on them?"

Bill Boggs, a student at Queen's University, doubted whether legalizing pot would change anything. He said marijuana leads to harder drugs, but saw merit in restricting its use to people 18 and over if it were to be made legal.

Neil Bergstrom of 2064 Campbell said he saw no point in people smoking pot. Alcohol may be no more harmful than marijuana, he said, but why compound the problem of drug use by introducing more legal drugs?

Time Not Right Leaders Claim

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A sampling of views from community leaders in Greater Victoria shows they are generally not convinced the time has arrived to make soft drugs legal, as recommended by the federal committee on youth Thursday. (See story Page 15)

But they appear receptive to the idea if research should prove marijuana and hashish not harmful.

The doctors, churchmen and school trustees contacted also did not believe in general that the alienation of youth was as complete as the committee's report suggests.

ONLY TWO

The report, two years in the making at a cost of $500,000, was assembled by David Hunter, 28, a Toronto sociologist, lawyer Vincent Kelly, 33, also of Toronto and Pierre Bourjon, 28, a sociologist in Montreal.

They offer 29 groups of recommendations, with comments on drugs and youth alienation being only two of them.

Local spokesmen were asked how they felt about the committees' recommendation that use of marijuana and hashish should be made legal for all at age 18.

They were also asked how they viewed in general what the committee calls "an open breach of confidence between adults and youth."

Allan McKinnon, chairman of the Greater Victoria school board and teacher:

"The Le Dain Commission report will have a lot more authority than this one and I'm just waiting for that report . . . I think a tremendous amount of research is required before people can decide how right or wrong these drugs are.

"It seems impossible to read two consecutive reports on marijuana that agree with each other."

McKinnon disagrees wholeheartedly with the committee's measure of youthful disenchantment.

"It's hard to give a short answer on this but my own idea is that the gap is narrowing . . . and I've noticed the hostility of four or five years ago is gone. Both sides will talk to each other."

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, Greater Victoria metro health board:

". . . Maybe marijuana and hashish don't harm people but I think they change personalities and if taken continually remove ambition; the urge to create something of one's life.

NOT TIME

"I don't entirely agree with legalization but certainly the penalties for using them might be less severe. I think the pushers should be dealt with . . . .

"I'm not saying no (to legalization) but I don't think this is the time. We've got to know a little bit more about it."

Bishop F. R. Gartrell, Anglican leader of the Vancouver Island diocese:

"I think the very fact of the harmful effects of marijuana and hashish are not disproven is the point. There is so much disagreement among people who ought to know . . . this is obviously no time to be considering legalizing something which is so doubtful."

On youth alienation, he said the problem is not one of age differences but of temperaments.

MANY ASPECTS

Dr. Phillip Ney, child psychiatrist and school trustee:

"There are many aspects . . . and one is that (drugs) are not just an individual problem but one society has to contend with. I don't think there is any good evidence that (marijuana and hashish) do not have a harmful effect on society as a whole . . ."

Ney explains that if soft drugs can be used to give people the pleasure previously found through the learning, working and achieving processes, then the value of these processes is going to be seriously challenged.

Do poeple want these traditional values changed?

"All I'm saying is that society is going to have to ask itself this. I think before marijuana and hasish are legalized there should be a plebiscite."

Msgr. Michael O'Connell of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral:

"I would go along with legalization if the really qualified people are convinced it should be legalized, if there's a common consensus after the medical people have studied all aspects.

"I wouldn't say it was a moral issue."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, asked about the youth committee report this morning, said: "That committee is part of the problem, not part of the solution."

Pollen's Planning Scheme Turned Back by Council

Planning Chairman Harold Olafson Thursday beat back an attack on his committee by Ald. Peter Pollen.

The attack, in the form of a Pollen scheme for a full-scale review of city planning objectives, was accompanied by Pollen's charge that planning in Victoria is "chaotic."

Council voted 4-2 to send the scheme of Olson's planning committee for study before it is again presented to council as a whole.

Olafson denied the charge of chaos and said Pollen had "plenty of opportunity" to solve planning problems when he was planning chairman.

Pollen had won agreement August 19 in his health and welfare committee to hold committee of the whole meetings and discuss a wide variety of planning objectives.

IN AGREEMENT

Olafson said Thursday he did not disagree with the idea but insisted the scheme be sent first to planning committee.

Pollen denounced the move as "just incredible" and predicted the idea would be "rerouted to obscurity."

Speaking from prepared notes, Olafson asked "how would he (Pollen) feel if I brought up a health and welfare matter in B Committee?"

As for the city's planning, "I don't feel it's chaotic." Recalling that Pollen had been planning chairman all last year, Olafson said "he had plenty of opportunity to correct (city plans) at that time."

Olafson insisted the planning committee had achieved a number of things this year, including designation of the Inner Harbor as a special development area, a review of the zoning bylaws, completion of an economic survey, purchase of the Ocean Cement property, adoption of the Rockland report and the building of a waterfront park on Belleville Street.

Olafson said any member of council can attend any committee meeting so Pollen should have brought his ideas to B Committee which includes planning.

"I am not saying I am against this. I am for it, but I feel it should have been put before B Committee."

TIME WASTE

Ald. Clyde Savage who is acting mayor in Mayor Courtney Haddock's absence, first said "it would be wasting time to go back to B Committee.

But he later voted with Ald. Percy Frampton, Hugh Ramsay and Olafson to send the idea back to committee. Ald. Tom Christie voted with Pollen.

Olafson made no mention of what the committee would do before again going before full council, but Frampton suggested the committee could decide priorities.

Pollen said "I don't think it's appropriate at all to have this buried in B Committee."

"I can see why planning is chaotic if this manipulation and manoeuvring has been going on through 20 years."

Uvic Grad Gets Award

Paul J. Pearlman of Victoria has been named first winner of the Queen Elizabeth British Columbia scholarship which was established earlier this year.

A 1971 honors B.A. graduate of the University of Victoria, Pearlman has been accepted at Cambridge University where he will study law.

Premier Bennett, making the announcement today, said Pearlman "compiled a remarkable record" at the University of Victoria and noted that the calibre of the 29 graduate students applying for the award was "extremely high."

★ ★ ★

Pearlman is also described as an ardent canoeist who has helped develop the interest of others in this sport.

The scholarship, valued at $5,000, is for study at a United Kingdom university. The award was established to honor the centennial year visit of Queen Elizabeth to British Columbia, in May.

The award winner is the son of Victoria lawyer Edwin E. Pearlman, 3275 Uplands.

American Professors Seen as Threat to Nationhood

The high number of American professors in our Universities is a warning that Canada is in danger of losing its nationhood, a leading research scientist and educator said Thursday.

Dr. Jacob Gerhad Rempel, a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and holder of its gold medal for achievement in education and research in Canadian entomology, was speaking to the Entomological Society of Canada conference at the University of Victoria.

Rempel, observing that Canadian and American universities are too "administration oriented," urged a national conference of Canadian universities and colleges to set up a Royal Commission to examine all aspects of university teaching.

"Too much in our curricula is, if not archaic, at least irrelevant to our times," Rempel said. "What was sufficient 10 years ago may be quite inadequate today." The retired professor from the University of Saskatchewan said statistics show that 40 per cent of Canadian university faculty members are foreigners compared to three per cent in Britain and 2.5 per cent in the U.S.

Campus Unrest

But in the humanities an even more lopsided proportion exists, Rempel said.

"Last year in one Canadian institution, in the department of philosophy with a regular staff of 20, 19 were non-Canadian," he said.

"A people in danger of losing its philosophy is in danger of losing its nationhood," Rempel warned.

In attacking university administrations Rempel contended the "administration is the university" attitude — with students playing a secondary role — is one of the major sources of campus unrest and campus unrest is the chief problem with the university institution.

He said that although university is not a school for social reform, professors have a responsibility to society and should speak out on problems of national concern.

Rempel was critical of the power of university administrators in selecting teachers, blaming them for the large number of ultra-conservative and apolitical professors in Canadian institutions.

University administrators have in the past consistantly discouraged any kind of political activity on the campus, Rempel charged.

In contrast with the conservatism of administrations, said Rempel, is the fact that today's "intelligent youth has the courage to protest openly and loudly a philosophy that may yet lead us into technological doom."

He added that many of the demands made by youth are legitimate and timely and enjoy the support of a substantial section of the faculty.

But at the same time, he reminded youth that in a university every individual is entitled to respect, dignity and freedom — a factor which some students ignored.

Rempel noted that Canada is experiencing an excessive demand for minerals, water and energy.

Spoiled Society

"This results in wasteful utilization of precious resources, and contributes to the destruction of our environment," he stated. "This excessive demand is first and foremost the result of promotion by a greedy sector of our business community, encouraged by irresponsible government officials, and welcomed by a spoiled and selfish society."

"But at stake is not merely our material wealth," he added. "At stake is our existence as a Canadian nation. In the face of this crisis will the academic raise his voice or will he maintain 'discreet silence?" Rempel thinks that professors should speak out, but expressed the fear that they would fail in their responsibilities to society because of policies and attitudes of university administrators.

He quoted an American science writer: "If there is a hell it is populated by people who kept silent when they should have spoken out."

Much of what is taught in universities, he said, fostered what Rempel called narrow professionalism.

He advocated a course of information integration, like one offered at the University of Saskatchewan. It involves more than 30 professors from the fields of biology, sociology, economics, chemistry, geography, veterinary pathology, law, the Indian-Metis Association, animal and crop science, agricultural economics, the humanities, education and medicine.

Rempel said that foreign languages and mathematics are the two fields of paramount importance today.

Lack of Aid

"In an open curriculum students tend to avoid the courses that call for hard work and discipline — mathematics and foreign languages, he said.

This might eventually eliminate Canadian students from competition at an international level, he said.

The scientists also deplored the lack of government financial support for the humanities and fine arts, noting that at the University of Saskatchewan in 1970 the natural and applied sciences received more than $5 million in grants; the social sciences $45,000 and the humanities $10,000.

"One of the woes of our time is that science is 50 years ahead of philosophy," he said. "The function of the humanities is to give proper perspective on human values.

He warned that if the present trend is allowed to continue, there would be a steady decline in every form of human activity.

ALLOWS YEN TO FLOAT

Japan Bows to Nixon

TOKYO (CP)—Japan bowed to international pressure today and allowed its currency to float temporarily as an alternative to outright revaluation.

The action, after two weeks of trying to hold the yen to parity of 360 to the U.S. dollar, was a major victory for President Nixon's program to return U.S. trade balance in the black.

A Japanese finance ministry announcement said the yen would be freed as of Saturday to find its own exchange level against the dollar.

The announcement said that as a temporary measure the official restrictions which prevent the yen from rising or falling more than one per cent either side of its official parity would be removed.

The decision was a dramatic reversal of an announcement by the government Tuesday that no action would be taken on the yen until multi-national negotiations in mid-September.

The decision to allow the yen to float was made at an emergency meeting of senior finance ministry officials called to consider the continued confusion on the Tokyo foreign exchange markets.

The yen, which was considerably undervalued, was the chief target of Nixon's announcement Aug. 15 suspending the gold standard and putting a supplementary levy of up to 10 per cent on dutiable imports into the United States.

Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta said floating the yen — allowing it to find its own rate according to the demand and supply—would be temporary.

Japanese commercial banks, anticipating the government's action, sold dollars heavily today on the Tokyo exchange, and the Bank of Japan bought a record $1.2 billion at the interbank rate of 357.37 yen, the usual intervention level.

The commercial banks had bought more than $500 million Tuesday and Wednesday after the central bank warned them to adhere more closely to its guidelines on required holdings. The commercial banks complained that this subjected them to undue risks since the dollar was floating on the European markets. The Bank of Japan then relaxed enforcement of its requirement, and the banks liquidated their dollar holdings.

CONTROL YEN MARGIN

Tadashi Sasaki, governor of the Bank of Japan, said in a statement that if the yen's margin of fluctuation against the dollar becomes too large, the central bank will buy dollars to stabilize the rate.

The Bank of Japan has bought about $4 billion in the last two weeks to keep the value of the yen down.

The government feared that increasing the value of the yen would cut into Japanese exports and have a deflationary effect that would intensify the sluggishness of the economy. But the pressure from abroad, and particularly the spectre of the 10-per-cent U.S. import charge, outweighed arguments in favor of standing fast.

The finance ministry said that in deciding on a temporary float, the government has not abandoned the yen's old par value.

"It is the intention of the government of Japan," it said, "to make active efforts, in collaboration with other governments, to reinforce the international monetary system so that the stability of external transactions can be restored as soon as possible," the ministry's statement said.

The finance ministry also announced that the government would submit a supplementary budget to the Diet, the Japanese parliament, to offset the effects of the U.S. import charges and also to improve "Japan's social infrastructure as well as the general standard of living."

FLOAT BOND ISSUE

Other measures will include active flotation of national bonds, additional fiscal loans, and an investments program.

The announcement came after Japan's external reserves jumped to more than $12.5 billion with the huge purchase of dollars.

Uncertainty over the yen's parity caused chaos and confusion on the Tokyo stock and foreign exchange markets, and bankers and businessmen warned that the markets could not stand much more pressure.

Official sources said the decision by the finance ministry meant Japan is prepared to run risks to ascertain how much the yen is undervalued, as claimed by other nations.

The officials said the floating, which follows similar action by most of the West European currencies, meant Japan could now more or less line up with West Europe in talks on parity adjustments next year.

UNDERVALUED

The Japanese action is expected to improve greatly the U.S. balance of trade deficit which now has grown to $676.4 million since January.

On the home front, Washington reports there has been a thaw in relations with powerful U.S. labor unions.

Labor and officials will now discuss action to be taken once the wage-price freeze has been lifted on Nov. 12.

Canadian Goods Benefit From Move

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian goods which were competing with Japanese exports in the United States now may be able to regain their position, an informant said today.

This is the likely result of Japan's decision to let the yen float in international exchange markets. But the extent of the improvement climate for Canadian exports will not be known until foreign exchange trading settles down to the new situation next week.

As officials here saw it earlier this week, Japan's attempt to hold the yen at its old pegged value of 360 to the U.S. dollar, while other major currencies drifted upward, was a desperate Japanese effort to retain a trading edge.

While Japanese goods would be hit by President Nixon's 10-per-cent surcharge on imports of dutiable goods, those of other countries going into the United States would have to meet the stiff price of the 10-per-cent surcharge plus the higher cost to American buyers of securing the foreign exchange needed to pay their bills.

Floating the yen, with the pressures in exchange markets for a higher valuation on it, means that American buyers of Japanese goods will also have to pay more for Japanese goods.

To the extent that Canadian goods compete with Japanese goods in the U.S. market, the floating yen should be of some benefit to Canadian exporters, particularly if the yen moves up substantially.

The main competitive areas are believed to be in synthetic rubber and plastics, and in machinery and mechanical and electrical equipment.

Meanwhile, Ottawa officials reportedly made "good progress" Thursday in their bid to rexemption from the United States' new 10 per cent import surcharge. Deputy finance minister Simon S. Reisman said today, however, no agreement was reached at the Washington session with U.S. treasury officials, called to follow last week's meeting between Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Treasury Secretary John Connally.

CANCER SPENDING CUT

The provincial health department had $450,000 to spend on cancer control last year, but spent only $72,174.

The $377,000 under-expenditure is one of many under-expenditures revealed in the abridged public accounts released Thursday by the provincial government for the year ending March 31, 1971.

Premier Bennett clamped tight spending controls on the government during much of the year because of a slowdown in the economy and in government revenues. He finished the year with a $16 million surplus.

A $600,000 public health research vote was underspent by $105,000; a $2.4 million vote for in-patient care of tuberculosis hospitals was underspent by $440,000.

"Grants for health agencies were under-spent by $123,000 on a total budget of $600,000.

In all, the public health service under-spent its $15 million budget by $1.5 million.

The mental health branch under-spent its $37 million allocation by $3.6 million, including a $2.3 million under-expenditure on a $32 million budget for in-patient mental care. Hospital insurance services were over-spent by $2.4 million.

Striking Calgary Guards Defy Back to Work Order

CALGARY (CP) — Guards at the Calgary correctional institution went on strike today, declining to follow the example of guards at other provincial jails who returned to work quickly after being served with a court injunction.

The Calgary guards planned a meeting to discuss whether they would follow the other guards who returned to work.

Guards at all five provincial jails were served with the injunction.

The injunction expires later today but the attorney-general's department can apply for a more permanent injunction shortly before the expiration.

Ernie Lawson, employee relations officer for the Civil Service Association which represents the 575 correctional officers who had threatened to go on strike, said his group was preparing to oppose the injunction request.

However, the association would allow the correctional officers to make their own decisions on whether they would stay on the job if the government obtained a further injunction.

PREVENTS PICKETING

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said today the injunction was issued to prevent picketing, not directly to prevent a strike.

"I would never restrain a man from quitting a job he did not like," Mr. Gerhart said in an interview.

The attorney-general has stated that any correctional officer who goes on strike will be fired because such a walk-out would be illegal.

The RCMP had been on standby alert, ready to take over duties at the institutions, when the regular guards walked off.

THE GOOD LIFE FOR INFORMERS

MARSEILLES, France (Reuter) — The United States bureau of narcotics offered big rewards and a comfortable life abroad Thursday to any Frenchmen giving information which would help smash drug rings operating near this Mediterranean port.

The offer came from European bureau chief John Cusak, who also suggested that French police deliberately overlooked the drug traffic here.

U.S. authorities have estimated that the bulk of hard core drugs reaching the United States from the Middle East passes through Marseilles.

Cusak offered to "compensate big rewards" to informers as well as "the means to live in safety outside France if the person compromised himself."

Legal Pot Draws Fire

Most early reaction to the report of the federal committee on youth dealt with only one of its 29 recommendations: The proposed legalization of such cannabis drugs as marijuana and hashish.

Police spokesmen, medical authorities and drug-abuse workers joined in disapproval of the proposal, rejecting it at least until more is known about the effects of the drugs. A few civil rights workers supported it.

"It is for the birds," said Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer.

Most officials declined comment on other committee proposals until they have studied the report. However, Saul Miller, Manitoba's minister of youth and education, said he agreed with recommendations for a new student loan program and the committee rejection of a $10 monthly payment to encourage students to stay in school until 18.

But the committee's recommendation on cannabis, which said existing laws against soft drugs are untenable, drew plenty of fire.

PREDICTED REACTION

Vincent Kelly, a Toronto civil rights lawyer and member of the three-man committee, predicted the reaction Thursday when he expressed dismay at the emphasis news reports gave to the cannabis recommendation.

"Our worst fears have been realized," he said.

David Lewis, leader of the Federal New Democratic Party, said he agrees that possession of marijuana should be removed from the Criminal Code but from reports on the recommendations "it sounds a little wild."

Robert Welch, Ontario minister of education, termed the cannabis recommendation irresponsible.

The Canadian Medical Association opposed the legalization of soft drugs because, it said, not enough is known about their effects.

Few Forecast Winner In Alberta Election

EDMONTON (CP) — The final major rally of the 1971 Alberta election campaign will be held tonight in Calgary and as the Monday vote approaches, few observers are brave enough to predict the outcome.

Neither Premier Harry Strom nor Progressive Conservative Leader Peter Lougheed, the front-runners in the campaign, will predict the number of seats they will win.

"We are confident," said Premier Strom, fighting his first election as government leader—a position he inherited in 1968 from E. C. Manning, now a senator.

"I sense a growing momentum and a desire for change," Mr. Lougheed told a crowd Thursday night in Edmonton's Jubilee Auditorium—a rally which attracted more people than the Social Credit rally Wednesday night.

Wednesday, however, the premier and his candidates had to compete with a Western Football Conference game in the city.

The Social Crediters and Conservatives have both held their major Edmonton rallies and the premier moves into Calgary tonight.

Grant Notley, the New Democratic Party leader who attracted 1,100 persons at a Calgary rally, says any more than one seat for his party would "be a bonus." Mr. Notley is predicted as the winner in Spirit River-Fairview in northern Alberta.

Liberal Leader Bob Russell, whose party has 20 candidates in the field, is fighting a tough four-way battle in St. Albert.

The number of seats needed to form a government in the enlarged 75-seat legislature is 38. Redistribution added 10 seats. At dissolution, the Social Credit government held 54 seats, the Conservatives 10 and one seat was vacant.

The Social Credit and Conservative parties each have full slates of 75 candidates while the NDP has candidates in 70 ridings. Three independents bring the candidate total to 243.

Ottawa Sets Up Security Group

OTTAWA (CP) — A security group to advise the cabinet and federal government on threats to the national social, political and economic order has been set up by the solicitor-general's department.

A department spokesman said today the force—called the security planning and research group—now has three members and will probably develop to 20 persons.

Although Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, vacationing in Europe, was not available for comment, the spokesman said the group will gather and analyse information "from all sources" and report to cabinet.

It was set up so "the government can anticipate things before they happen," the spokesman said. It will gather and report information "that might appear from non-military, subversive groups."

Although it has no direct connection with other police forces, the group will have close liaison with the RCMP and other forces.

The spokesman said the group was set up partly because of the October crisis in Quebec. At that time "there was a great deal of confusion and information was not getting to the right people quickly enough."

The group now is composed of Col. Robin Bourne, a former adviser to the Privy Council in internal security and an artillery officer, Lt.-Col. Walter Dabros, a former member of the armed forces security branch and S. Sgt. Patrick Banning, formerly of the RCMP.

The three have no assigned budget, but are receiving salaries, the spokesman said. The department will spent about $20,000 on the group this year.

"But that depends on how quickly they recruit."

Cows, Dogs 'Sensed' Quebec Killer Slide

MONTREAL (CP) — A herd of cows and two dogs apparently sensed the St. Jean Vianney landslide disaster three hours before it happened, investigators revealed in a preliminary report Thursday.

The massive earthslide swept through the small town 115 miles north of Quebec City May 4, moving 15 million tons of earth, swallowing up 40 homes and killing 31 persons.

The report was prepared by three investigators led by Quebec government geologist Jean-Yves Chagnon.

The investigators studied the terrain and interviewed dozens of area residents for information on the slide which swept through the town of 1,300 as many were preparing for bed.

Pitre Blackburn, a farmer, testified that he was unable to send his cows back to their grazing land at about 7:30 p.m. on the night of the disaster. The slide occurred three hours later.

"The cows, though usually docile, refused two attempts to put them out in the field so that Mr. Blackburn had to leave them in the barn," the report said.

The field was washed away by the slide, the report added.

Two other disaster survivors reported that their dogs began behaving "abnormally" around 7 p.m. The animals were described as being extremely nervous.

One man said his dog acted the same as he did during a thunderstorm.

Both pet owners saw their streets torn in half by the slide.

A chilling description of the disaster was given to investigators by Mrs. Roger Filion. She reported that Mrs. Lise Laforge, who perished along with her three children in the slide, called her between 10:30 and 10:45 p.m.

Mrs. Laforge asked Mrs. Filion if she felt a slight earthquake. She said she could suddenly see the lights of the city of Chicoutimi from a window in her home.

This was unusual because the view of the city had been previously obstructed from the Laforge home by a hill 30-feet high. But the hill was swallowed up in the slide and moments later the Laforge home went with it, taking Mrs. Laforge and her three children to their deaths.

Bus driver Jules Girard said he was driving his bus when he slowed down to pass over what appeared to be a small gully in the gravel road.

"However, as the front wheels of the bus reached the gully, the soil in front of the vehicle just 'disappeared' and the bus got stuck on the edge of the slide with its front wheels in the air," the report said.

Girard ordered the 18 passengers to escape via the rear door and was the last man to leave the bus. He then ran in a westerly direction, describing the sensation of the 150-foot climb as like running on moving stairs."

He had time to warn the inhabitants of one house on the way but could not get to three other houses.

Mr. Gerard saw the three houses disappear into the crater with a sudden, vertical movement the report said.

He also saw a car driving down the road disappear into the crater.
